

Huge Hinesville Army Base Bogs In Red Tape

By HAROLD MARTIN.
Staff Writer.

HINESVILLE, Ga., Jan. 30.—The snoozing alligators of the Okefenokee swamp are going to have their rest disturbed soon by the bursting shells of army anti-aircraft batteries.

Not that Uncle Sam has anything against the somnolent saurians, or their neighbors, the mink, the bullfrog and the turtle, who soon will find themselves sprinkled by a rain of steel fragments from the skies.

But he's got to train his troops in firing practice somewhere and it is beginning to look as if it will be a long time before he can fire a gun on the huge range at Camp Stewart here without hitting an old inhabitant who is still dwelling in his ancestral home.

The gigantic anti-aircraft center will be finished in a month and ready for the 15,000 troops who will eventually man it. But land acquisition has progressed so slowly here that even at this date only one-tenth of the farms have yet been surveyed—the first step in the interminable processes of government purchase.

Partly the Army's Fault, And Partly That of Others

It's partly the army's fault, for they have asked the Department of Agriculture, through its soil conservation service, to do a job in a period of months that isn't humanly possible to do that quickly.

It is partly the fault of the Department of Agriculture, because it took over the job and has failed to provide its workers in the field with the men and the tools and the authority to spend money necessary to do the job as quickly as it could be done.

And it's partly the fault of the people who live on the land, for the understandable human failing of valuing their property not only in the light of what it is worth economically, but in the light of its sentimental value, as the land their fathers and grandfathers cleared before them.

Even if these human bottlenecks could be cleared away overnight there still would remain plenty of headaches that aspirin can't cure.

360,000 Acres Is a Lot Of Land, Army Men Say

In the first place, the 360,000 acres of the Hinesville reservation, army men say, represents more land in one chunk than all the land the government had to buy in 1917-18. In the second place, the land down here is not divided into land districts and land lots.

It is what is known as "head-right" land and it is described on the deeds, when a deed can be found more recent than 1880, as "lying between Jim Brown's place on the east and the old Joe Smith home place on the west," and so on. Jim Brown and Joe Smith may have been dead for 50 years and their property may have passed through half a dozen hands since, but the old record is still the only way the land-buying agency has to go about finding the place it has to survey.

The owner, of course, knows in general where his land lines are. It runs along a creek bank to a lightning-struck pine and thence to a pile of stones and from there to a big oak, and so on. But when the surveyor goes in to work he finds the pine and the oak cut down these many years and the piles of stones washed away or buried. When he finally gets through he may find that the owner has 20 acres more than he thought he had, or 50 less.

Headquarters Fumble; Proper Tools Not Sent for Survey

On top of these natural difficulties that nobody can overcome in a hurry, there has been some fumbling up the line that has added to the handicaps of the surveying crew.

When they came in to start the surveys in November, they couldn't get the proper tools. The stuff sent in for them to work with was unsuited for the job, broken, or worn out.

They finally got men enough together to man 12 crews, but had instruments for only eight.

They couldn't get transportation facilities provided and crews had to go out in the cars of the workmen, with the man providing the car getting 5 cents a mile for the service, but only one car was allowed per crew and nobody wanted to tear up his car hauling six men, plus axes and other equipment, over rough country.

They finally got three ancient station wagons and worked them in shifts, but one is now broken down, and they can't get the authority to spend the few dollars to have it fixed.

On top of that there is some sort of rule, which nobody down here seems able to explain, which says that a non-civil

Lieutenant Cuba Heath, of the Atlanta police department, last night was found guilty on charges of conduct unbecoming an officer by the police committee and discharged.

Acting Lieutenant E. H. Johnson, for about 18 years a motorcycle patrolman, was promoted to succeed Heath. No action was taken to fill the vacancy resulting from Johnson's promotion.

The committee also, advised a proposed ordinance to legalize pin ball machines and ordered Chief M. A. Hornsby to transfer Lieutenant E. W. Ginn to the traffic department to the job now held by Lieutenant Harry Maddox, who is to retain his rank. A special

BRITISH AID MEASURE IS VITAL TO U. S., HOUSE GROUP WARNS

Suspension Bill Passes Senate by 41-To-8 Vote

Act Is Altered To Force Call Of Legislature

Body Reconsiders Measure After Defeat in Original Form.

By LUKE GREENE.

Governor Talmadge won an overwhelming victory in the state senate yesterday afternoon when that body voted, 41 to 8, in favor of the controversial suspension bill giving him the power to oust the state treasurer and comptroller general for cause—a measure which Senate President Charles D. Redwine, administration leader, described as being the key to the whole Talmadge program.

Senators who voted against the bill were: Gross, of the 20th; Hill, of the 36th; Lanier, of the 18th; Martin, of the 3d; McGehee, of the 25th; Park, of the 19th; Smith, of the 24th, and Smith, of the 35th.

As passed, the bill carries an amendment offered by E. O. Dobbs, of Barnesville, providing that in the event of a suspension the Governor will immediately call on the general assembly to convene within 30 days for ratification or rejection of his action.

Debate Four Hours.

Members of the upper house debated for more than four hours on the bill, which was defeated in its original form last Friday and then reconsidered and amended. Most of the senators who changed their votes explained the amendment providing for a trial had removed their objections.

The senate also concurred in minor amendments to the family driver's license and highway reorganization bills and sent them to the Governor, who immediately signed them into law.

As the senate took up the suspension bill, Senator Marvin L. Gross, of Sandersville, introduced a substitute bill affecting not only the comptroller general and state treasurer but also the secretary of state, attorney general, and superintendent of schools and providing that should they show cause for suspension the Governor would prefer charges and then call the general assembly into session for hearing. The substitute was defeated by a vote of 40 to 9.

Attacked by Park.

President Redwine led the fight on the floor for passage of the amended measure. His speech came just before the vote was taken and after Senator J. B. Park, venerable jurist from Greensboro, had attacked the bill on the grounds that it was unconstitutional.

When Redwine rose to speak he said he felt his honor as a senator

House Passes 4-Year Term For Governor

A constitutional amendment extending the term of the Governor and four other constitutional officers from two to four years was given house approval yesterday by a vote of 187 to 2.

The vote came after discussion of whether or not the proposal would be retroactive brought forth an administration-sponsored amendment to prevent it from becoming effective until January, 1943. The provision was passed unanimously on the motion of Roy Harris, author of a substitute amendment and chief critic of the measure as originally drawn.

Language Clarified.

An amendment offered by Lewis, of Burke, clarifying the language of the article's effect on the constitution also was adopted. By a vote of 94 to 92 the house passed a second administration-sponsored amendment cutting the Governor's salary from $7,500 to $5,000 a year that would not become effective until next term. An amendment introduced by Representative Jones, of Brantley, raising the Governor's salary to $25,000 a year and abolishing the fund for the upkeep of the executive mansion also failed to pass.

The amended measure will be sent to the senate for confirmation. If it passes the upper house by the necessary two-thirds majority, it will be submitted to the voters for ratification next June.

May Seek Re-election.

Debate on the bill brought an indication that Talmadge will seek re-election. Asked if the proposal to cut the chief executive's salary applied to the present or the next governor, Representative Lovett, of Laurens, replied, "the next," adding that "by the next governor he also meant the present one."

Constitutional officers whose terms would be lengthened in addition to the governor are the attorney general, secretary of state, the comptroller general and the state treasurer.

Floor Leader Culpepper's un-

Trustees Vote Out President Of Wesleyan

Dr. Dice R. Anderson To Be Replaced at End of Term.

MACON, Ga., Jan. 30.—(AP)—Wesleyan College trustees voted today to replace Dr. Dice R. Anderson as president.

Dr. Anderson, head of the institution for almost 10 years, will remain through commencement about June 1.

The action was taken at a called meeting of the board and was announced afterward by Dr. T. D. Ellis, of Louisville, Ky., the chairman.

Dr. Ellis said no successor was chosen, but that a nominating committee was named. The committee was instructed to request a full meeting of the board when it is ready to report.

The trustees felt, Dr. Ellis said, that the school needed a different type of administration and their action "in no way reflects on the character or scholarship of Dr. Anderson."

The board also recommended reduction in the number of trustees from 36 to 23 and elimination of any requirement as to ministerial representation on the body. Dr. Ellis said.

Trustees also appointed a committee to guide the recreation and social activities of Wesleyan, one of the oldest chartered women's colleges in the United States.

Sub Is Sighted Off Newfoundland

NEW YORK, Jan. 30.—(AP)—The British freighter Shear Crown radioed tonight that she had sighted a "suspicious submarine" approximately 60 miles east of St. John's, Newfoundland.

Her call, heard here shortly before 8 p. m. (Atlantic time), said she was at "latitude 47.52 north, longitude 50.34 west."

The freighter's call was the first indication that Axis submarines might be operating in this area at the northern end of the Grand Banks and outside the Pan-American neutrality belt.

Supplies From U. S. Weakest Link in War, Admiral Warns

Foot, Transport Chief in World Conflict, Tells Atlantans Convoy System Now Needed To Save Britain.

The line of supplies from the United States to England is the weak link of this war, and American destroyers and light cruisers must convoy four million tons across the Atlantic in the next year to keep Great Britain ahead of the Germans, Rear Admiral Percy W. Foot, retired, U. S. Navy, said here yesterday at the organization meeting of the Southern Committee to Defend America by Aiding the Allies.

Atlanta has been designated as the headquarters for the entire south and a central office will be established here immediately. Rear Admiral Foot was in charge of ships transporting troops to Europe in the last war, and is credited with the remarkable feat of removing 3,000 men from a torpedoed ship in 18 minutes, with the loss of only 23 lives. He was awarded the congressional medal of honor. He retired in 1936 and now lives in Chapel Hill.

"The sinking of ships might easily be the limit of our own fighting, and conveying supplies will release our first line of defense, the British fighting forces, for strengthening Mediterranean defenses, and Germany will be contained in continental Europe," he declared, adding that passage of the lease-lend bill and allowing conveying are the methods by which American aid might be given short of war.

Rear Admiral Foot said that we now have enough ships for conveying without moving our heavy fleet from Honolulu, thus keeping in check the Japanese, "who aren't really prepared to fight, but will grab off anything in the east if the opportunity arises."

In urging Americans to face the danger instead of being lulled into a sense of security, he praised the work of the Committee to Defend America, and said we must act now to escape the fate of the French. Refuting isolationist theories that we must not fight unless the war is in "our own back yard," the retired naval officer declared that this is contradictory to the essence of victory, namely, carrying of war into enemy territory.

Also speaking at the meeting was W. T. Couch, head of the University Press, of Chapel Hill, N. C., who said the purpose of the committee is to get us out of the war which Hitler declared on all democracies when he published "Mein Kampf," and that we can't get peace by merely wanting it. In Atlanta, Chester B. Blake, chairman of the organization committee, which includes Colonel William R. Brewster, Mrs. Harold Bush-Brown, L. R. Chubb, Mrs. Reginald S. Fleet, the Rev. Urge Prompt Enactment of Barrier to War Measure Termed Legal and Constitutional by Committee.

By The Associated Press. WASHINGTON, Jan. 30.—A 17-to-8 majority of the House Foreign Affairs Committee urged the house tonight to pass the lease-lend bill, asserting in a formal report that its prompt enactment was "of the highest importance to the vital interests of our country—and even of our civilization."

The committee asserted that after extended hearings and public discussion it was clear that:

"Our national policy is a should be: (a) To keep out of war; and (b) for our own national security, to aid Britain and those other nations whose defense is vital to the defense of the United States by supplying them quickly and as efficiently as possible with defense articles in a manner consistent with our democratic procedures."

"Meets Objectives." "In the considered opinion of your committee," the report continued, "the bill as amended squarely meets these objectives of our national policy. It is the considered view of your committee in so far as human minds can evaluate the situation, that the probable effect of the bill will be to keep us out of war rather than get us into it."

"It is also the judgment of your committee that the bill provides the most efficient way of supplying all possible material aid to those countries which are resisting aggression."

"It accomplishes this objective in a manner which is best for our national defense and wholly consistent with the constitution and international law."

The report was issued at the close of a day which saw the committee approve the bill, say Representative Martin, the Republican leader, announce his opposition, and saw the Senate Foreign Relations Committee receive confidential information from Secretary of War Stimson.

Gerard Favors War. The senate group also heard James W. Gerard, former ambassador to Germany, say he favored an immediate declaration of war against the Hitler government, an advocate passage of the bill as a weapon for "lightning defense against 'lightning war.'"

The pending measure would give President Roosevelt broad authority to have military supplies manufactured here or elsewhere, with the treasury, subject to later congressional appropriations, footing the bill. The President then could sell, lease, lend or "otherwise dispose of" the products to nations whose defense he considered essential to the defense of the United States.

All U. S. Ships Aiding British Will Be Sunk, Hitler Warns

Germany Is Ready To Strike Decisive Blow, He Declares.

BERLIN, Jan. 30.—(UP)—Proclaiming that Germany is ready to strike a mighty "blow of decision" against Britain this spring, Adolf Hitler today warned the United States that every American ship attempting to carry last-minute aid to the British "will be torpedoed."

Germany and Italy are ready if the United States chooses to plunge into the war and "anyone who seeks to destroy Germany will get a rude awakening," the Reichsfuehrer said in defiant answer to President Roosevelt's program of all-out aid to Britain.

The Fuehrer asserted, in a speech broadcast throughout the world, that Germany has no quarrel with the American people but that "if they attempt perhaps to intervene in the European conflict that will only bring us the more quickly a change in our objective."

Hitler spoke, with explosions of hatred and a smattering of wisecracks, before a wildly cheering crowd of more than 13,000 at the Berlin Sportsplatz on the eighth anniversary of his rise to power as chancellor and master of Germany.

Germany has secret weapons—he called them "blue wonders," German idiom for big surprises—in store for the mighty assault on Britain by land, sea and air, Hitler boasted.

His 90-minute speech promising a final German victory in 1941 was heard throughout Germany and Nazi-conquered Europe as well as by millions abroad through radio hookups extending to Italy, Japan, Slovakia, Hungary, Bulgaria, Finland, Yugoslavia and other countries.

He declared: "1—If the United States attempts to send aid to Britain 'then we say this: Every ship with or without convoy that approaches England will be torpedoed.'"

2—Britain is "pinning hopes on the United States" but "we have calculated every possibility in advance" and the Reich stands ready to cope with every eventuality of United States intervention.

3—It is "clear to all that Germany has no quarrel with the United States and has no interests on the American continent" but if the United States tries to defeat

Traffic Fatality Rate in State Is Below Nation's

Georgia Has Four Per Cent Increase, U. S. Six Per Cent.

Although Georgia's highway death rate in 1940 showed a 4 per cent increase over the previous year, it was still 2 per cent under the fatality increase reported throughout the nation. According to figures released yesterday by National Safety Council headquarters in Chicago, 774 persons were killed in Georgia traffic accidents last year. This was an increase of 31 deaths over the 1939 total.

The national death rate increased 6 per cent, according to the council, as 34,400 persons were killed last year compared to 32,386 in 1939.

Georgia's 1940 traffic death rate was 24.7 per 100,000 population. It was a rate of 16 deaths per 100,000 automobile miles, which was a 5 per cent decrease over 1939.

Safety Commissioner John Goodwin attributed the state and national increase to heavier traffic during the year and more automobiles on the highway.

Lower Budgets Approved for State Agencies

All Allowances Except Two Passed, Says Auditor Thrasher.

Further slashes in the operating expenses of state departments were announced yesterday by State Auditor E. B. Thrasher Jr. He said all state agencies except the Highway Department and the University System have now had their first quarter budgets approved by Governor Talmadge.

Budgets approved yesterday and expenditures for the previous quarter were announced as:

Division of parks, $8,336 and $14,612; division of mines, mining and geology, $7,204 and $7,600; forestry division, $66,332 and $74,439; wild life division, $12,307 and $29,712; veterinarian, $11,875 and $15,315; and regular operating expenses of Department of Agriculture, $57,085 and $66,956.

Thrasher said the sharp cut in the wild life division resulted from failure of that unit to become completely organized. He estimated its average quarterly budgets would approximate $47,000. Likewise, he said the cost of the farmers' market would increase as soon as the new market under construction here was completed.

TALMADGE SIGNS FIRST BILLS—Governor Talmadge made the first law of his third-term administration yesterday afternoon when he placed his signature on the first two administration measures passed by the general assembly. He is signing the act which will establish the family driver's license and the highway reorganization bill which ousted Chairman W. Lint Miller.

Highway Board Members Take Oath of Office

After Signing Reorganization Bill, Talmadge Swears in Trio.

After signing the state highway reorganization bill, Governor Talmadge yesterday afternoon administered the oath of office to the three new members of the board. The appointees, two of whom already have been serving on the board, are W. E. Wilburn, of Oglethorpe, who will succeed ousted Chairman W. Lint Miller; S. E. Vandiver, of Lavonia; and T. G. Tyson, of Camilla.

Under the highway reorganization measure the chairman will remain on duty full time and receive an annual salary of $5,000 per year, while the other two members will get $10 per day for the time they work.

Suspension Bill Is Passed by State Senate

had been assaulted by the intimation that he would help to sponsor a bill that was unconstitutional.

Declaring he was "calling a spade a spade," he said:

"If you kill this bill you will be destroying everything you've done since you've been here. This is the key to the whole situation. Kill this bill and your whole program is gone."

Offices Different.

He read from the State Constitution, charging at the same time that opponents of the bill had yelled unconstitutionality, but had not quoted one line from the document. He pointed out that the offices of comptroller general and state treasurer were different from those of other elective officials in that they had control of the state's funds.

"If you'll co-operate with Governor Talmadge and not tie his hands and scuttle him, he's going to pay his state out of debt," Redwine told the senators. "His enemies want to see this bill fail because they want to say there was one time when the Governor didn't keep his promises."

The senate president warned that "there is a sinister influence at work in the capitol," and added that it was just a question of whether "we are going to let the dog wag his tail or let the tail wag the dog."

Lanier Opposes.

Senator Wilmer D. Lanier, of Augusta, was one of the principal opponents of the bill. He spoke for more than an hour, slowing down only when President Redwine asked the unanimous consent of the senate to remain until a vote was taken on the measure, even if it had to stay until after dark.

Supporting Lanier were Senators Gross, Park and John H. McGehee, of Talbotton.

Lanier declared the people of Georgia did not want the senators to be "pussyfooters." He said his main objections to the bill was that the Governor might get so "fed up" with the state treasurer or comptroller general, that he might pitch them out of office during the last 30 days of his administration and they would have no recourse, even though they were elected by the people.

Draws Analogy.

Lanier drew an analogy by citing the fact that a sheriff would not lock a man up for 30 days and then prefer charges against him.

The Augusta senator said he did not make up his mind to vote for or against the bill on the basis of personalities, adding he thought Governor Talmadge would "settle things civilly and right."

During his lengthy speech Lanier let the senators know he was not a candidate for governor.

Throughout the debate there were cries that there was a veiled purpose behind the bill and that the principal objective was to insure the removal of State Treasurer George B. Hamilton.

Senator McGehee, who injected a generous dose of humor into the debate, recalled that Governor Talmadge told the general assembly Monday that he loved Hamilton when he appointed him and that he still loved him.

"Biblical Student."

"The Governor is a great Biblical student," said Senator McGehee, "and I am sure he must be abiding by that passage of Scripture which says that 'Whom he loveth the Lord chasteneth.'"

He asserted he would never be a party to a transaction which chopped a man's head off.

"The whole scheme is to get the state treasurer," he charged. "The bill strikes at the character of people. It provides that a man be kicked out of office by the dictates of one man without having a charge preferred against him."

could not pass the measure otherwise."

Senator Park argued that to deprive a man of his office for one day was just as much a violation of the constitution as it was to keep him out for 30 days and that he was basing his contention upon the ruling of the supreme court.

State Protected.

He claimed that the present law was sufficient to protect the state, explaining that if the treasurer refused to pay out money on warrants in violation of the constitution he could be carried into superior court on a mandamus action and forced to perform his duties or else go to jail.

Senator Gross told the senate that the reason Hitler was so powerful today was that "back yonder legislation was passed making it possible to overreach and overstep." He insisted that the piece of legislation might be compared to a friend telling you he loved you, but at the same time going around with a shotgun on his shoulder. He made it clear, however, that he was arguing for a principle and that his statement were to be associated in no way with Governor Talmadge.

Attacks Hamilton.

Senator H. B. (Hell Bent) Edwards, of Valdosta, took up the five minutes he was allowed to explain his vote by attacking Hamilton. "If the senate doesn't pass this bill Hamilton can pay every bill of the past administration before he pays the bills of Governor Talmadge," he said. "What has Hamilton done in the past four years? He has sat down there with a pen in his hand. And who has he paid? Oh, my God, who has he paid?"

At the conclusion of the vote the senate ordered that the amended bill be sent to the house of representatives immediately.

Informed of the senate's action, State Treasurer Hamilton said he had no comment.

House Votes 4-Year Term For Governor

qualified indorsement of the un-amended measure when it was first placed before the house brought on a sharp debate as to whether or not it could be interpreted as lengthening the terms of those officers who were elected last November to serve through 1942.

He objected to Harris' proposal that it be changed to prevent it from becoming effective until 1943, saying "the governor can run for four years next time."

"I've no objection to the governor's running again," Harris said, "but do object to the ambiguity of its language." Harris then offered the amendment he had been suggesting.

"I guess it one way, the gentleman from Fayette can guess it another way and the Supreme Court will have to guess again," was Harris' reply to Culpepper's statement that some of the ablest lawyers in the state had told him the measure would not be retroactive.

Then Harris made the point that while he was in office the governor was out of the reach of the state court and that his construction of the measure would decide whether his present term would be for two or four years, a point that was later strengthened by Representative Williams, of Bacon.

Representative Elliott, of Muscogee, took the floor with two amendments he said had been suggested by the governor, one clarifying it as Harris and Williams wished, the other the salary-cutting proposal. Harris moved the unanimous adoption of the first and asked that his own amendment be withdrawn.

Discussion of whether or not the chief executive could maintain the dignity of his office on $5,000 a year brought the observation from Representative Smith, of Carroll, that the governor could "be plenty dignified" on it.

George Terms Hitler Speech a Morale-Builder

Made To Reassure German People, Georgian Declares.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 30.—(P)—Chairman George, Democrat, Georgia, of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, said he thought Adolf Hitler's speech in Berlin today was directed primarily at bolstering the morale of the German people.

"Undoubtedly," George said, "the speech was made to reassure the German people that the pending lease-lend bill was not unexpected by the German government. Its obvious purpose was to bring reassurance to the German people."

In the speech, Hitler said that "whoever wants to help England will have to realize that whatever ship is going to come in front of our torpedoes will be torpedoed."

George called this a warning that Germany would treat as the ships of a belligerent any American vessels sent to England with supplies. The neutrality act now bans such shipping, but the possible use of American naval units to convey supply ships is a point in the continuing discussions on the aid-to-Britain bill.

Senator Pepper, Democrat, Florida, a member of the Foreign Relations Committee, said "that speech will gain support for our bill. It is not news to us that Mr. Hitler is against us, however. American foreign policy is made in accordance with our interests—not Mr. Hitler's interests."

Another member of the committee, Senator Van Nuys, Democrat, Indiana, asserted that Hitler's statement was "a perfectly natural one" for him and would "not affect our situation in the least."

Several committee members sought a recommendation from Chief Hornsby before passing on the bill of the officer, but Chief Hornsby took the stand that it was up to the committee to pass on the guilt or innocence. Once they had found Heath guilty, the chief announced that if the officer was guilty he was not a fit man to have on the force. Thereupon, the committee adopted a resolution that Lieutenant Heath be discharged "on recommendation of the chief."

Mayor LeCraw Present. Mayor LeCraw sat with the committee when the meeting opened, remaining until they passed their ordinance setting up a traffic board of citizens and officials. Just before the Heath trial started, LeCraw left, declaring that he had 100 per cent confidence in his committee and would not sit on this or any other trial committee during the year.

Heath's attorney, Lon Duckworth, through a series of witnesses, developed that on the night of January 4, Lieutenant Heath had been met at the police station by Mr. and Mrs. H. L. Wallace and had been taken to their home on Glenn street, where he remained until about 1:30 o'clock, when they took him to his home.

Heath Denies All. Lieutenant Heath, in a sworn statement, said he had never been out with either of the women accusing him and also testified that he was with the Wallaces the night and the hour that it was charged he was, in full uniform, out on a party with Florrie Smith, Jimmie Caldwell and Mrs. Neal. He said he had never before last night seen to know Florrie Smith, whom he was alleged to have had a date with, and that his only acquaintance with the other woman, Mrs. Neal, was that she had worked some time ago in a restaurant opposite the police station.

Both the Smith woman and Mrs. Neal testified that they had been out with a boy named Jimmie (they were not sure about the last name, but identified him in court as Jimmie Caldwell). Florrie Smith, who testified first, said her roommate, Janelle Neal, came to her place of employment just before midnight Saturday night, January 4, and asked her to go to ride with her and a boy named Jimmie and another fellow. She said she agreed to go for a short while, but that she had to come in early as she must work the following day.

Smelled Liquor. "I didn't know where we were going, but we drove up to the police station and Lieutenant Heath walked out in full uniform," Florrie Smith testified. (She identified Heath in the courtroom.) "I smelled liquor on his breath."

She then charged they drove by Heath's house, where he got some liquor, and that they then drove to some roadside establishment. On the way back she alleged Heath beat her and then struck her roommate when she tried to interfere.

The Smith woman further said Heath and Jimmie threatened to put them out and make them walk home, finally driving them home after telling them they'd run them out of town if they told anybody about the night's party.

Positive Identification. Mrs. Neal, who said she was divorced, told much the same story, although it was not as forceful and without the feeling. Both were positive in their identification of Heath and Jimmie Caldwell, but were a bit hesitant before identifying Chief Hornsby, Superintendent of Detectives J. O. McKibben and Captain G. Neal Ellis, all of whom had talked with them to get statements during the investigation of their allegations.

Jimmie Caldwell testified that he had not been on a party with either of the girls on the night in question and that on that date he had attended a midnight showing of "Tin Pan Alley" at the Fox theater. He also denied ever having been on a party with Lieutenant Heath.

M. P. Reynolds, a patrolman, testified as to hearing Caldwell state that he and Heath had had Blazing Engine Is Cut From Passenger Cars. HAVRE DE GRACE, Md., Jan. 30.—(P)—A quick-witted engine crew cut a blazing electric engine loose from passenger cars of a northbound Pennsylvania railroad train and raced nearly three miles for help today.

Volunteer firemen donned gas masks to spray chemicals on the fire on the engine's ceiling. Railroad officials said a short circuit apparently started the blaze.

The Washington-New York express train was delayed 65 minutes until another engine was sent from Wilmington, Del.

Ships Carrying British Aid To Be Sunk—Hitler

Germany it will find "Europe ready to defend itself."

4—Germany is ready to deliver a knockout blow at Britain "to force a decision in one way or another" with "land divisions markedly increased and equipped as never before; our U-boat war in the spring will show that we have not slept, our air force will continue to do what it has done and, altogether, they will force a decision."

5—The U-boat drive will break the British blockade and defeat the enemy's hopes of "defeating the Reich by starvation" and "Britain will starve before Germany starves."

6—The year 1941 will bring victory for Germany and "break the tyranny of the capitalistic interests, helping to cement good relations between peoples."

7—Germany seeks only what was stolen from her after the World War by "the broken promises of the American President, Wilson"—a shouted statement that brought derisive cries of "Pfui!" from the crowd.

8—When democracies such as the United States help one another "they want something—military bases or such."

Stand Together. 9—Germany and Italy stand solidly together and hopes for revolt within Germany or Italy are "idiotic" and those who are spreading such propaganda should look to their own internal situations.

When Hitler and Mussolini shake hands "we do so in permanent friendship."

10—Britain, despite her vast colonial conquests, is "the most backward social state in Europe" and the British empire has "left a path of blood and tears behind it."

When we consider the existence of this empire we see that it demands the complete negation of Europe as a unified political factor."

Hitler's voice rose and snapped like that of a Prussian drill sergeant and he seemed to shake with emotion when he attacked the democracies, and the "Jewish plutocratic internationalists."

He ended his speech on a pious note, praying to God for a Nazi victory.

"We pray that the Lord God may not desert us during the coming year," Germany, Sieg heil!" he said in conclusion.

War Calculations. In his first speech since December 10, when he said that Germany could "beat any power on earth," Hitler said that Germany from the start had taken into her war calculations the possibility of United States aid to Britain.

"That Germany has no quarrel with the American people is known to everyone who is not intentionally misrepresenting the truth and claims the opposite," he said. "Germany never had any interests on the American continent unless that it helped in the fighting for the freedom of this continent."

"If now this continent attempts, perhaps, to intervene in the European continent, that will only bring all the more quickly a change in our objective. Europe will then defend itself."

"They should not deceive themselves about us. Whoever imagines he can aid England must, in all circumstances, know one thing: that every ship whether with or without escort that comes before our torpedo tubes will be torpedoed."

The war will continue, he said, but the fighting of the past year and a half has "practically decided the outcome." And "the year 1941 will be the historical year of a great new order in Europe."

Asserting that Germany has no quarrel with the United States, the Reichsteurer said that Germans fought with the American people "for the liberty of their continent," referring to the American Revolution.

Hitler, without discussing his recent conference with Premier Benito Mussolini, turned to the question of Italy and reports of Fascist internal troubles.

"Instead of inventing rebellions in Milan our enemies should watch out for rebellions in their own countries," Hitler shouted. "When consider our relations with Italy as they used to look at their own relations with each other... the Duce and I are neither Jews nor opportunists. When we shake hands we do so in permanent friendship."

Military Reverses. Hitler referred to Italy's military reverses in Africa and Albania, at the hands of the Greeks and British, saying:

"If occasional lack of success of our partner is going to convince them that Italy is going down, they are mistaken."

Hitler said his enemies hoped for a blow-up in the Balkans but that "I should not hope for too much there either for, wherever England appears, we shall attack her and we are strong enough to do so."

"They also hope in a lesser degree for hunger (to beat Germany), but we have organized our life. We know there is no luxury in war, but starve the German people will never, never do. Perhaps the English may."

Again and again Hitler spoke of Germany's increased armed might and striking power.

Council Group Puts 7 Men on Traffic Detail

Lyle Requests Police Committee Be Consulted on Uniforms.

The police committee of city council last night ordered seven men from the detective bureau to be assigned to traffic detail to work the downtown area and directed Chief Hornsby to assign all available men now on duty at the police station to work traffic.

The committee also directed advertising be placed calling for bids on contracts for towing cars for the city.

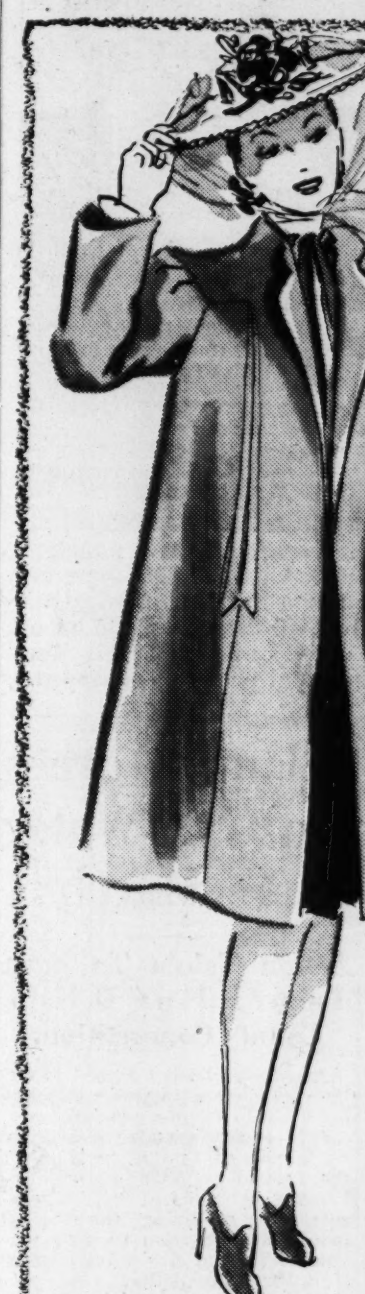

Councilman George Lyle requested that the police committee be notified the time for selecting police uniforms so it could sit with the committee of patrolmen in choosing them.

In the traffic board ordinance as passed, the mayor will appoint 10 members, six citizens and four city officials. They have been announced as Major Clark Howell, George Biggers, L. L. Gellerstedt, Charles Jagels, Albert Gossett, Chief Hornsby, Mayor LeCraw, Dan Bridges, Raymond Torres, and a hotel man yet to be named.

Captain Jack Malcom requested that Patrolman M. L. Thomas be given the title of traffic engineer. Chairman Bridges assured Captain Malcom that it was his understanding Mayor LeCraw was going to appoint Thomas.

A request was made that Patrolman H. G. Cunningham be transferred to the traffic department so that he might have Sundays off and go to church.

House Rejects G. O. P. Effort To Slash Fund

Proposal for $50,000,000 Reduction Beaten by Democrats.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 30.—(AP)—A Republican attempt to lop $50,000,000 from President Roosevelt's proposed new emergency fund of $125,000,000 failed in the house today along with a series of other attempts to pare down the $1,404,576,838 "independent offices" appropriation bill.

Reduction of the presidential fund was proposed by Representative Case, Republican, South Dakota. The house rejected his amendment without a record vote.

In rapid succession, the Democratic majority beat down other Republican attempts to cut sizable amounts from the bill.

Two Scandinavian Ships Sunk by 'Enemy Action'

NEW YORK, Jan. 30.—(AP)—Two ships that formerly traded between eastern United States ports and Europe—the 5,613-ton Swedish freighter Oxelosund and the Norwegian freighter Haalegg, 1,758 tons—have been sunk by "enemy action," maritime sources said today.

No details were available except that the Oxelosund went down near Narvik, Norway.

Atlanta Agrees To Cut Water Rate March 1

Action Taken To Meet Impending DeKalb County Competition.

Atlanta yesterday agreed to cut its water rates to meet impending DeKalb county competition. City council's water committee recommended that after March 1 the federal prison and Fort McPherson be billed at "city whole-sale rates providing the federal prison will abandon its four private wells and buy all its water from the municipality."

This means an annual reduction of about $7,000 a year to the two reservations, but it was pointed out that when the city begins supplying the ordnance depot at Conley this reduction will be more than made up.

Committee members held that "satisfied customers" will be the department's slogan in the future, and in an off-the-record discussion emphasized that steps must be taken to preserve city sales in a large area to which the DeKalb system will be available within the next few months.

Federal Jury Indicts U. S., German Firms

Group Is Charged With Stifling Magnesium Production.

NEW YORK, Jan. 30.—(AP)—A conspiracy to restrict and stifle domestic production of magnesium, resulting in delay and impediment of the defense program, was charged today against a combination of American and German firms.

A federal grand jury which returned the indictments against six corporations and nine of their officers said its purpose was "to destroy unlawful foreign restrictions on domestic production of magnesium for defense purposes."

Named in the indictments were the Aluminum Company of America, the Dow Chemical Company, the American Magnesium Corporation, the Magnesium Development Company, the General Aniline and Film Company and the I. G. Farbenindustrie (commonly known as the German dye trust).

Individuals named were Arthur V. Davis, chairman of the board, Aluminum Company of America; Roy A. Hunt, president; Irving W. Wilson, vice president, and Wilfred D. Keith, of the corporation's patent division; Willard H. Down, president, and Earl W. Bennett, vice president, of the Dow Chemical Company; Karl Hochswender, president of the Magnesium Development Company, and two members of the managing board of directors of I. G. U. S. To Double Size Of Brooklyn Navy Yard

NEW YORK, Jan. 30.—(AP)—Mayor F. H. LaGuardia said tonight that the Navy department planned to double the shipbuilding facilities of the Brooklyn Navy yard at a cost of approximately $15,000,000.

The mayor said in a press conference that he had received a communication from Secretary of the Navy Frank Knox that "would indicate that two new ways will be constructed" and that they would be large enough to permit construction of 45,000-ton battleships.

World Plight Dims Birthday For Roosevelt

U. S. Happier Because Free Philosophy Still Exists, He Says.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 30.—(AP)—President Roosevelt suggested to his countrymen tonight that American birthdays were happier this year than they would have been, "because all of us are still living under a free people's philosophy."

He spoke from the White House by radio to thank people from coast to coast who were observing his 59th birthday by attending parties to raise money to combat infantile paralysis. To all who labored "in this great cause," he voiced his gratitude "from the bottom of my heart."

But Mr. Roosevelt said it was not a completely happy birthday for him because "these are not completely happy days for any of us in the world."

"Shall we say," he continued, "that American birthdays this year are being made at least happier than they would otherwise be because all of us are still living under a free people's philosophy?"

Lights of Peace Blaze.
"It is not only that the lights of peace blaze in our great cities and glow in our towns and villages—that laughter and music still ring out from coast to coast—that we will return to safe beds tonight."

"It is not that we feel no concern for the plight of free people elsewhere in the world; that we do not hope that they may continue the freedom of their governments and their ways of life in the days to come."

"It is because we believe in and insist on the right of the helpless and the weak and the crippled everywhere to play their part in life—and survive."

"It is because we know instinctively that this right of the unfortunate comes under our free people's philosophy from the bottom up and can never be imposed from the top down."

Mr. Roosevelt, besides making the radio talk, cut one of his seven birthday cakes at the 18th annual reunion of the "Cuff Links Boys" at the White House, while thousands from coast to coast made merry that handicapped children might be happier.

Georgia Celebration.
At the Warm Springs Foundation in Georgia, frequently visited by President Roosevelt, the patients dined around a cake "iced" with dimes.

At the White House there was a swapping of campaign tales that date back to 1920 when Mr. Roosevelt ran unsuccessfully for Vice President, for among the guests were five of the eight men who went through it with him.

These men were the original "Cuff Links Boys"—so named because at the end of that campaign the candidate gave each a pair of cuff links.

Britain Plans Giant Army By September

Moves Quickly To Meet Hitler's Threat of "Decisive" Blow.

LONDON, Jan. 30.—(UP)—Britain is moving speedily to meet Adolf Hitler's newest threat of an imminent "decisive" blow in the war, tonight laid plans for an army of perhaps 8,000,000 men, or nearly double the fighting force mobilized throughout the World War.

Hitler's warning of an all-out attack by land, sea and air in his speech today was cited in authoritative British quarters as stressing the need for shipment of all available United States war supplies to Britain without delay.

The speech of the Fuehrer, on the eighth anniversary of his rise to power, was described as lending greater weight to prevailing British opinion that Germany will launch a huge offensive this spring in an effort to deliver a knockout before American aid can become effective.

In its plans for a huge expansion of the British armed forces, including the substitution of women for men in industrial plants, the government is working toward a goal which may provide 7,000,000 to 8,000,000 troops by September.

Naval Vessel Tries To Float The Manhattan

Destroyer Churns Sea But Fails To Move Stranded Liner.

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla., Jan. 30.—(P)—Units of the United States Navy gave a hand today in attempts to refloat the grounded liner Manhattan.

A destroyer, the 246, worked unsuccessfully with three ocean-going tugs during the afternoon. Other destroyers were expected to join the attempt, but naval sources declined to say how many would come or when they would arrive.

The destroyer sought, by racing along in deep water and churning her propellers, to create a swell that would help lift the Manhattan from the sand bar on which she has rested since the night of January 12.

DANCING FEET—Atlantans from every walk of life tripped the light fantastic last night for a grand cause—the fight to stamp out infantile paralysis. This picture, made at the Capital City Club, was typical of other dances held at six other hotels and clubs.

Atlanta Gives Freely To Aid Paralysis Fund

Dances, Floor Shows Brighten President's Birthday Fete.

By LEE ROGERS. Atlanta wished the President a happy birthday yesterday and showed her appreciation by contributing generously toward the fight to stamp out infantile paralysis.

It was a gala occasion for the well-of-limb. They danced and made merry, cheered floor shows and for a few brief moments sat or stood quietly listening to a radio address by President Roosevelt from Washington.

For them, it was a festive outing. But behind it all was a mental picture of some fair-haired child lying bedridden with twisted bones and of another hobbling around on crutches dragging a useless leg.

For this privilege of fun-making the well-of-limb and contributed to aiding in the fight sponsored by the President to stamp out the dread disease which is maiming the youth of the nation. He knew it personally, having risen from a sick bed to achieve leadership of a nation in time of trouble.

Seven Big Parties. Seven big public parties were held last night, to say nothing of numerous privately sponsored affairs and club-sponsored benefit teas and bridge parties. The same things were happening throughout the nation, but Atlanta and Fulton county—capital city and county of the President's adopted state—were out to lead the nation in the 1941 drive.

Based on advance ticket sales, Chairman A. L. Belle Isle, of the Fulton county celebration committee, said attendance at the parties probably surpassed all records heretofore set at these birthday celebrations.

The parties got under way early. Lewis Ridley's orchestra began the music and dancing at 9:15 o'clock at the Ansley hotel. A little later a floor show entertained. Mike Benton was master of ceremonies of this traveling floor show unit which visited each of the seven dances before the night was over.

Atlanta's Best Talent. It offered some of the best talent Atlanta has. In it were Pittman & Evelyn in their talk of the town swing waltz act; Alice Strickland, doing some sensational control acrobatics; Mary Ann Linsay, drawing gasps from the crowd; with her high-kick toe dance specialty. The singing trio, "Meenie, Minnie, Mo," sang the popular favorites of the day, and Kay Kimball, in native costume, thrilled with her authentic interpretations of the Hawaiian dances.

All in all the floor show lasted 30 minutes at the Ansley, then, behind a motorcycle escort, the unit moved to the Henry Grady hotel, where another party was under way with Nu Nu Chastain's orchestra furnishing the music. The show presented here, the police sirens screamed again and the floor show sped down the street a block to the Capital City Club, where Don Earl and his orchestra made music for the dancers.

Then the unit moved to the city auditorium, where Perry Bechtel's band was playing; then to the Biltmore hotel, where Harry Hearn was furnishing the music; thence to the Piedmont Driving Club to interrupt the soft strains of D. Leonard's orchestra, and finally to the Standard Club, where Phil Schoeneck and orchestra played.

Dancing Cavaliers. The tickets to the dances were good at any or all seven. The committee for the celebration of the president's birthday urged the ticket holders to visit all parties. A great many did, in cavalcades. Throughout the day the Salvation Army had been busy collecting dimes for the fund at three March of Dimes tables which had been set up on Peachtree street and on Broad. Twenty-five members of the Business Women's Club and 75 Salvation Army lassies joined forces to canvass downtown buildings to collect donations and give the donors buttons.

School children previously had joined the campaign with their dime contributions.

All in all, when 1 o'clock this morning rolled around, everybody had had a fine time and wearily headed home, hoping he had helped the President have a very happy birthday by swelling the fund to carry on the infantile paralysis fight.

TO PRACTICE IN MIAMI. LOUISVILLE, Ga., Jan. 30.—H. E. Smith, of Louisville, who was assistant state attorney general under the Rivers administration, has announced he will join a Miami law firm.

25 Atlantan Hotel Workers Go on Strike

Picket Line Is Placed Around Hostelry As Parley Fails.

Twenty-five employees of the Atlantan hotel, members of the Hotel and Restaurant Employees' Union, Local 851, an AFL affiliate, yesterday went on strike, it was announced last night by Albert Gossett, AFL organizer and president of the Atlanta Federation of Trades, who said a picket line was established around the hotel.

Gossett said the union had attempted to negotiate an agreement with the hotel management for the past two months, covering such points as seniority, recognition of the union, pay increases, and vacation with pay.

J. Will Yon, manager of the hotel, told The Constitution: "We have always paid our employees well and treated them well, and never had any complaints about pay or working conditions. I have always done all I can for my employees."

Closer Accord Between U.S., Mexico Is Seen

Ambassador Returns To Mexico City To Discuss Negotiations.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 30.—(UP) Settlement of outstanding differences between the United States and Mexico appeared nearer tonight as Mexican Ambassador Francisco Castillo Najera arrived in Mexico City, presumably to discuss with his superiors the trend of current negotiations here.

Secretary of State Cordell Hull declined to discuss the significance of Najera's trip—he flew to the Mexican capital—but he hoped for early developments in connection with United States-Mexican negotiations.

For the past six months, Najera and Undersecretary of State Sumner Welles have been holding extensive conversations in an effort to clear up outstanding problems. During that time, Najera has flown to Mexico frequently to carry messages and receive instructions.

Chief problems awaiting settlement include:

1. The oil expropriation controversy, dating from March 18, 1938, when the then Mexican President, Lázaro Cárdenas, seized the properties of 17 American, British and Dutch oil companies.

2. Claims for lands belonging to United States citizens and firms, which were taken over under the revolutionary agrarian reform program.

3. Boundary problems which resulted in Mexico claiming jurisdiction—before its 1911 revolution—over territories which now lie north of the Rio Grande river, including the Chamizal district in what is now a part of El Paso, Texas.

These problems were created primarily by deviations in the course of the Rio Grande.

4. Other problems growing out of damages to American interests in the Mexican revolution, including nationalization of Mexican railroads built with United States capital.

listing land for rent and sale all over 20-odd counties in this area. It is offering to go with the people and help them get reasonable terms. It is advising everybody to rent for a year and look around while before buying. It knows that a man who goes into another county announcing he's from Hinesville will be looked upon as a plutocrat with pockets stuffed full of government money. It has also formed a corporation and has bought up about 14,000 acres down in Jeff Davis county, where about 75 families can settle.

569 Families to Move. There are about 569 families in the area that is to be cleared as quickly as possible. The FSA has enough land listed to take care of about 300 of them. In addition, Henry Ford has his place at Ways will take 70 families.

The FSA will also help them move, if they need help, and will see that they have subsistence until they get straightened out.

But the people don't want to move until they find out what they are going to get for their homes. So they are sitting tight, for which you can't blame them.

However, though everybody is doing the best he can to get things going, something drastic must be done. The soil conservation men must get better backing from Washington, more men, more tools, etc. The interminable red tape of getting the sale approved after owner and appraiser have agreed has got to be cut so the farmer can get his money quickly.

He has been told he can borrow up to 80 per cent from the banks as soon as he signs his option. But he does not like the idea of paying interest. He'd rather the government check would come.

If some cash money could start flowing in here, option signing would pick up. But at this late date, only one small farm has been approved for purchase, and it hasn't been paid for yet.

Nobody Is Happy. The sum of it all is, nobody is happy. The Army isn't because it has a nice, new house to live in, and 7,000 former residents still dwelling in the backyard. The Soil Conservation Service isn't, because the Army is needing it to hurry on. And the people aren't, because they don't know what the future holds for them.

The only people who are happy are some nine or ten lawyers in Liberty, Long and Bryan counties. They are going to split a $75,000 fee for running the titles.

All the land now being ironed out, somehow, somehow. But it will take a while. And it looks like a bad year for the alligators.

BED OF PAIN—Two-year-old Sandra Windom tried to smile bravely—but couldn't make it—yesterday as she lay on a bed of pain at Georgia Baptist hospital, where she is fighting gamely to recover from critical burns. With her is her mother, Mrs. Hoyt Windom. The child was burned while playing in the kitchen of her home in Carroll county.

Firm To Offer Plan To Repair Auditorium

Cost of Reconstruction Will Be Approximately $190,000.

Plans for early construction of the fire-razed front portion of the Municipal auditorium will be given impetus at a meeting to be held at 3 o'clock this afternoon in Mayor LeCraw's office.

Representatives of Robert & Company, engineers and architects, will submit drawings for rebuilding the structure of fire-proof material at a cost of approximately $250,000. The city has a reserve of $190,000 from insurance collected on the burned portion.

Drennon also invited a special citizens' committee, which has urged immediate rebuilding of the front structure, to be present.

Under the plans, the outside of the rebuilt portion will be of limestone, with an offset at the third floor to "avoid the appearance of a box."

The ticket windows will be inside an enlarged and modernistic lobby trimmed with Georgia marble. Second and third floors, formerly occupied by the National Guard, will be given over to greatly enlarged exhibit space, and the main auditorium is to be fitted with electrical and water outlets for large convention exhibits.

Virgil Shepard heads the citizens' committee, with the following others serving as members: L. L. Austin, L. Ralph Bush, James F. deJarnette, Herman Fulton, Dr. Edgar H. Greene, Ray Lang, Marvin A. McDonald, C. M. McMillan, Ralph Ramsey, George Ripley, Joseph S. Shaw, Ed A. Wachendorf, Harry Zaban and Mike Benton and A. L. Belle Isle, ex-officio members.

The front portion of the building was destroyed by an Armistice night fire, and the city collected $200,000 for fire loss. About $10,000 of the sum has been expended in repairing damage and razing dangerous walls.

Scalded Baby Bravely Battles For Life Here

Electric Lights Used In Effort To Dry Up Deep Burns.

Little Sandra Windom, her blond locks tossing restlessly under the heat of numerous electric lights rigged up in and around her hospital bed in an attempt to dry up the severe burns that cover her body, was fighting for her life yesterday at Georgia Baptist hospital.

Twenty-nine days ago the 2-year-old daughter of a Carroll county sharecropper was burned critically when the legs of the wood stove, under which she had been playing in the kitchen, gave way, dumping a gallon of stewing tomatoes, a pot of hot coffee and a kettle of boiling water on her, hospital attendants were told. Until Wednesday little Sandra was treated at home by her father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. Hoyt Windom. Then the burns became infected and special attention was necessary immediately. They rushed the little girl to Georgia Baptist hospital here.

Hospital officials give Sandra a good chance to pull through once some blood transfusions are given. There will have to be some skin grafting, too, for her little body, legs and arms are severely burned. One leg is a bit drawn and an attempt is being made to treat it so it will not permanently be deformed.

Field Fund Voted By Council Group

City council's finance committee yesterday agreed to allocate $15,000 as the city's share of erection of hangars and administrative buildings for the 128th Observation Squadron, Georgia National Guard, at Camp Gordon.

Actual appropriation depends only on receipt of the sum over and above 1941 anticipations, and Mayor LeCraw and other members of the committee emphasized that "is no likelihood that the amount will not be available in the next few months."

service employee on a surveying crew can't work but three months, which means that by the time a man gets the hang of the job he has to quit.

Pretty soon five surveyors will be laid off because of that if the rule isn't changed, and it's as hard to find diamonds in this sandy soil as it is to find a surveyor. The Soil Conservation Service can pay only $150 a month for a surveyor, and one that's any good can get $250 nearly anywhere in private work.

The result is that with the full opening of the camp only a month away, only 150-odd of the 1,500 tracts have been surveyed.

When finally the survey is made and the land is appraised, there is still plenty of grief. The Soil Conservation Service, by policy, leans over backward to be fair to the farm owners. They don't want the government robbed, of course, but they want to give the owner the benefit of every doubt.

Two appraisers were discharged, in fact, because their estimates of the worth of the property was held by a checking appraiser to be consistently low. Often a man has placed a smaller valuation on his land than the government appraiser did.

There are those, of course, who aren't satisfied with the government appraisal. And some of them may be right, for the Soil Conservation people aren't infallible. But it can be said for them that they do their best to be fair.

Real Estate Boom. Another thing that has slowed up option-signing is the fact that land in the surrounding area, outside the project, has skyrocketed in value. The Hinesville farmers, seeing this happen, are worried.

The main thing, though, that is worrying the people who will have to move is the fact that things are getting along so slowly. They have been told that they will all have to get out by March 1, and that they can't start any farming operations. This means that if they do move, they will have to find a place and get on it too late to start a crop. They will lose a year, and still they haven't been able to find out what they can get for their place, nor when they can get the money, nor where they can find another place.

These things would all be easier to overcome if there weren't a few in the community who keep things stirred and in a turmoil. One is a preacher. The other is a storekeeper. Neither own a foot of land. Some others who are loud in their complaint about what the government is offering haven't yet had their land appraised.

Despite the uproar, and a growing feeling that the government should consider what the farmer will have to pay for new land when he moves. The buying agency so far has been able to sign up about eight out of ten those lands have been appraised.

Army Impatient. The army, of course, is getting impatient. Its $6,000,000 plant is nearly ready for the troops, but the troops can't go into their full course of training until the people are off the land. The Army has even said something about whole-sale condemnation proceedings, but the Soil Conservation Service has scotched that. Leaving out the human side of it, how can you condemn land if you haven't even found out yet where it is? they ask.

And even if it could be condemned, and the people moved off, how then would you ever find out where the land lines are if the owners weren't there to help find them?

Which brings us back to the Okefenokee alligators. The Army, seeing it couldn't get its firing range cleared soon, had to find some place they could shoot without hitting anybody. They chose two places. The first, the Laura S. Walker State Park, 40,000 acres on the edge of the Okefenokee.

The other is an area on Amelia Island, near Fernandina, Fla., where they can fire out over the ocean. At Amelia they can shoot at targets loved by planes. At Walker Park they can't, for fear of plunking a saw-mill community that's in the area. The big guns have to have nine miles straight ahead of them, and about 15 miles to right and left cleared before they can fire.

Will Do for Awhile. Fortunately, the two temporary areas will serve well enough for a while. The troops coming in will have to have months of basic training before they can get to the firing stage anyway. And in the meantime the soil service has worked out a plan. They are concentrating their whole efforts on one pie-shaped wedge of the big fan-shaped area. They will try to buy that land and have it cleared of people by March 15. That will give the army enough firing range to start on. Then they will start work on the rest of the territory.

People whose homes lie more than 15 miles from the camp don't have to worry about what they will do this year. They won't have to leave until later on, maybe in 1941.

STUDEBAKER'S DEFENSE ORDER FOR AIRPLANE ENGINES IS A "PLUS" ORDER

Separate division is being created to expedite production of Studebaker's share of national defense program

WHEN the Government asked Studebaker to build airplane engines on a big scale, it was not the Studebaker plants or facilities that the Government wanted, but rather the Studebaker organization of engineers and production executives.

The Studebaker program for producing airplane engines will have no effect, in itself, on Studebaker production of automobiles. The equipment in Studebaker plants is not suitable for the manufacture of airplane engines and therefore separate equipment for that purpose is being provided.

Studebaker production of automobiles will be affected only if defense requirements for materials or labor necessitate a curtailment of production by all automobile plants.

The 1941 Studebaker Champions, Commanders and Presidents are more and more popular with motorists because Studebaker is offering more real value in these great new motor cars at their low prices than anybody else in the automobile business.

The Studebaker Champion is generally recognized as the highest quality car in the lowest price field—and it's the lowest priced 6-cylinder sedan in America.

See it and drive it now—and see for yourself why it saves you substantially on operating cost as well as first cost. Convince yourself that it's the most restful riding, easiest handling, lowest priced car in America. You may use your present car as part payment—easy C.I.T. terms.

Our country's national defense program creates new problems and new responsibilities for all of us. Studebaker intends to discharge its defense responsibilities in a manner which will add luster to its name.

Railroad Scout Here in Search For Hostesses

Southern Seeks Girls With 'Streamlines' for New Trains.

The two new streamlined trains of the Southern railroad will have streamlined hostesses, "tall and with their weight in the right places," according to Miss Wanda Myers, of Washington, D. C., director of the hostess service, who is in Atlanta to interview attractive aspirants who answer her description of the perfect hostess. She fits it pretty well herself.

An innovation in the Southern Railway System, these girls will don natty blue-green gabardine uniforms, with matching sailor berets, must be between five feet six inches and five feet nine inches tall, must like people and engaged girls need not apply. For the hostesses who are planning matrimony are not wanted.

Their duties will be those of a hostess in her home, making the guests more comfortable. With one exception the train hostesses will not introduce passengers to each other, because this might cause complaints from some persons, Miss Myers said.

They will not, of course, be called on to wait on the passengers as servants, but will be around in the coaches, diners, and tavern cars to make everybody feel at home. Headquarters for the girls, there will be five on the Southern from New Orleans to New York, via Atlanta, beginning March 15, will be Washington.

Miss Myers was busy interviewing hopefuls yesterday afternoon and will receive all girls between 25 and 33 years of age, who are interested, between 1 and 4 o'clock this afternoon at the Georgian Terrace hotel.

"But I do prefer my girls to be members of large families, I doubt if an only child can do the work," she said, adding that the old and infirm passengers will get attention first, women with children second and "then we'll give some time to the men."

Bill Increasing U. S. Debt Limit Wins Approval

House To Get Measure Monday, Doughton Announces.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 30.—(UP)—The House Ways and Means Committee today tentatively approved legislation to boost the national debt limit to $65,000,000,000, provide for taxation of income from future federal securities, and authorize sale of small denomination savings certificates.

The double-barreled measure is designed to help finance the multibillion-dollar preparedness program.

Democratic members of the committee agreed on terms of the measure after defeating a Republican proposal to set the debt limit at $60,000,000,000. It now stands at $49,000,000,000.

Chairman Robert L. Doughton said he would introduce the bill, as approved by his colleagues, Monday. The committee then will formally report it, with house passage likely before the end of next week.

Major provisions would:

1. Authorize sale of "defense" savings stamps, certificates and bonds, similar to those sold during the World War. Lowest denomination would be 25-cent stamps; then $5 certificates, and finally $25 bonds.

2. Eliminate the differentiation in existing law between the statutory $45,000,000,000 ordinary debt and the special authorization for an additional $4,000,000,000 of defense bonds. Both categories would be included in the proposed lump-sum $65,000,000,000 limit.

3. Authorize imposition of taxes on income derived from federal securities issued in the future. Income from bonds already issued would continue to be tax-exempt.

Willkie Makes Call Alone on Man-in-the-Pub

Pulls Tap, Serves; Plays a Losing Game of Darts.

LONDON, Jan. 30.—(AP)—Ambulance and fire stations will be studied at first hand tomorrow night by Wendell L. Willkie, who came here to see for himself how badly Britain needs United States aid for her war effort.

Willkie said he would leave for the provinces Sunday night or Monday, going to Coventry, Manchester, Sheffield and Birmingham if possible, and would start for home the middle of next week.

The American said this curtailment of his visit had nothing to do with getting home to testify on the aid-to-Britain bill, when Willkie was informed that Senator Gerald P. Nye, isolationist leader, had said he ought to be heard. Willkie said he would be "delighted" to appear at the United States senate committee hearing on the bill.

"As I said before I left the United States I am perfectly willing to testify before the house and senate committee at any time," he commented. "In fact I'd like to."

Willkie made an unannounced call on London's man-in-the-pub today, drinking and talking with "the boys" and playing a losing game of darts.

Harry Phillips, proprietor of the saloon, where Willkie played darts with an idle laborer, broke out a bottle of champagne, 1929 vintage, to celebrate the visit.

The man who beat Willkie at darts looked happy and astonished.

"Blimey! I'm going all international," he said.

Willkie said later his opponent was "too good."

"Also he knew the rules, and there's something to that," he said.

At the first pub Willkie visited the proprietor invited him to come behind the bar. A group of soldiers recognized Willkie and he ordered a round of beer. At their suggestion he pulled the tap and served.

Willkie said later he had discussed with officials the things most needed by Britain, but would not talk on this subject until his return to the United States.

G. O. P. Leader Flays Aid Bill, Asks Changes

Martin Favors Principle, But Opposes Power for President.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 30.—(AP)—Soon after the house Foreign Affairs Committee had approved the lease-lend bill today, Representative Joseph W. Martin, Massachusetts, the Republican floor leader, emphatically announced his opposition to it and called for "substantial" amendments.

Explaining that he favored the idea of helping England and speaking approvingly of a proposal that Great Britain be given a $2,000,000,000 credit to spend here as she pleases, he objected to the bill because he thought it would give the President unnecessarily broad powers.

"I am for the principle," he said, at a press conference, "I would like to aid England... but I don't think that in order to aid England we have got to take tremendous powers away from congress and give them to the President."

There was no intention, he emphasized, of making a party issue of the legislation. No canvass would be made, he said, and a Republican conference, called for tomorrow, was for the purpose of an "informative" discussion of the measure only. At the same time he said that a great majority of his Republican colleagues undoubtedly would vote against the bill.

Four amendments, proposed by administration leaders, were adopted and all other efforts to change the measure or restrict the grant of authority to the President were beaten. Martin referred to the amendments approved as "window dressing," and said they were essentially meaningless.

Axis May Invade Latin America, Welles Warns

Negotiated Peace Now Would Be Futile, Says Official.

NEW YORK, Jan. 30.—(AP)—Questioning whether a negotiated peace now would "be worth the paper on which it was written," Sumner Welles, undersecretary of state, declared that an Axis victory in Europe would lead to economic and political attacks on South America. He added that if these attempts were successful a "physical invasion" of the area would soon follow.

He described this as a more imminent danger than an "immediate attack directed against continental United States" and asserted that "the menace to our security through the passage of the control of the high seas to unfriendly hands is to my mind overwhelmingly apparent."

In an address prepared for the annual dinner of the alumni association of the New York University School of Law, Welles declared that this nation must be prepared in its own self-defense to render Great Britain, China and Greece "all necessary assistance which America can produce."

"The provisions of the legislation now pending in the congress (the lease-lend measure), if enacted into law, would greatly facilitate that task," he said.

Answering accusations of Japanese leaders that the United States is "pursuing an aggressive policy in the Far East" and that "we have placed our line of defense in the western Pacific," Welles asserted this country's "lines of defense are determined solely by the acts and by the policies of other nations."

Mercury Falls To 30 Below In New York

By The Associated Press.

Update New Yorkers last night remained indoors and took all possible precautions to offset some of the coldest weather yet served up this winter.

Skiing and other winter sports at Saranac Lake were brought to a virtual standstill by a 30-degree-below-zero temperature while at Owls Head, known as the Adirondack "refrigerator," the mercury dropped to —25.

The cold was not confined to upper New York. New York city having its coldest day of the year. New snowfall added to the discomfort of a 9.1 degree early morning reading there.

The cold moved in suddenly, causing temperature drops as high as 26 degrees at Albany. The mercury reached seven below there. Burlington, Vt., with 15 below zero, reported a 25-degree drop. The snow, which covered most of the St. Lawrence valley and the Great Lakes region, was light, and added little to that already covering the ground.

Models for '41 To Be Shown Here by Buick

New Cars Will Extend Price Coverage to Lower Levels.

New Buick models will appear in showrooms tomorrow morning in Atlanta and throughout the country.

Addition of four new models to the 1941 series 40 special line, with torpedo-styled bodies, a three-inch shorter wheel base and six-inch reduction of overall length, was announced yesterday by Harlow H. Curtice, president, from Flint, Mich. They have been entered in volume production.

"Designed as an addition to the lowest-priced group of Buick cars, the new models will extend Buick's price coverage to lower levels," his statement declared, "and will meet a demand for a compact, high-performance automobile, conforming to Buick standards."

The four new models are built on a shortened chassis, having 118-inch wheelbase, and include a six-passenger, four-door sedan; six-passenger sport coupe with full width rear seat; three-passenger business coupe and six-passenger convertible coupe with automatic top.

Excepting the shortened wheelbase, they have chassis units identical with the standard series 40 cars, with radiators, hoods and sheet metal the same, and body trim, interior equipment and appointments identical within the limits of the new body styles.

"Such standard Buick features as for-n-aft direction signals, actuated by a lever on the door jamb switches, concealed running boards, ash trays, assist cords and other interior conveniences are standard equipment on the new cars," the statement read. "Upholstery materials of the same specifications as the larger series 40 cars are used. Similarly, the same paint combinations are specified."

"This group of models will bring Buick very close in price to the three other high-volume producers in the lowest price field."

Mayor Named High Officer in National Guard

Commission of Lieutenant Colonel Conferred by Adjutant General.

Mayor LeCraw, of Atlanta, yesterday became Lieutenant Colonel LeCraw, of the Georgia National Guard.

The commission was conferred by Georgia's Adjutant General Sion B. Hawkins and climaxed several days of conferences.

In December, LeCraw, who held the rank of major, was forced to resign as provost marshal of the Thirtieth Division so his army status might not interfere with his service as the city's chief executive.

He said the Rivers' administration could have helped him retain his rank in inactive service if it had wished, and yesterday just to prove his point, General Hawkins commissioned him to the inactive list and raised him from a major to a lieutenant colonel.

"I had never expected to cast aside my 20 years training in military," LeCraw said. "If war comes, I expect to serve my country."

Anticipating that LeCraw may be called into service, city council has asked the Georgia assembly to amend the city charter so that LeCraw may get a military leave of absence without pay and that the mayor pro. tem. shall serve as mayor while LeCraw is away with the fighting forces.

The bill is now under consideration by the Fulton and DeKalb delegations.

Spot Annexing Plan Dropped By Committee

Torras Ordered To Draft Program Including Home Sections.

City council's ordinance committee yesterday abandoned the city's "proposed spot annexations" program and instructed Raymond W. Torras, engineer-secretary of the city planning commission, to prepare a new map which would "straighten out the present irregular lines in almost every direction and which will annex fashionable residential districts as far north as Buckhead."

The new proposal probably will be ready for council's action February 17.

The program abandoned would have extended municipal lines in eight different sections and annexed a dozen large industrial tracts and several thickly populated industrial districts.

Representatives of practically every industry and every one of the eight areas which it was proposed to annex were present at yesterday's hearing to object to the extension of the city limits.

The industrial representatives pointed out that a double water bill now being paid outside the city would offset any financial advantage the city would get in taxes and urged that they be left alone.

Among other actions of the committee were:

1. Approved a proposal to place all city department heads not now affected by civil service under civil service, making them amenable to council, and providing that their offices could be vacated only through impeachment, resignation or death. Department heads would hold office for life during good behavior.
2. Approved a charter amendment requiring a two-thirds favorable vote of council to dismiss a department head.
3. Sanctioned police requests that city officers be allowed up to 30 days a year sick leave to become effective only after a doctor's certificate shows the applicant has been ill for five days, and another measure making suspension of indicted members of the department optional with the chief and the police committee.
4. Approved a revision of the city charter to allow the city to pay into the treasury of the police pension fund on an actuarial basis instead of deducting 25 percent of all costs and fines, in vogue under present charter provisions.

All the proposals require amendments to the city charter, and therefore must be approved by the Georgia legislature.

BRINSON, Ga., Jan. 30.—(P)—Three unmasked bandits entered a grocery store here last night, robbed Owner W. O. Hodges of $100 in cash and several checks and made a getaway toward the Alabama state line, Decatur County Sheriff W. J. Catledge said today.

Socialism Seen As Aftermath of Europe's War

Correspondent Believes England Will Win With U. S. Help.

ATHENS, Ga., Jan. 30.—(P)—Ben Robertson, PM's London war correspondent, speaking at a faculty dinner given in his honor at the University of Georgia last night, declared, "regardless of who the victor of this war is, the countries of the world will see a state of socialism at the end."

Robertson, who was formerly connected with the London staff of the Associated Press, went back to London last June as war correspondent for PM when that paper began publication in New York.

Since his return to the United States in early January, he has spoken before many public gatherings and described the actual conditions existing in war-torn England.

"The English people will die rather than see their country invaded by Germans," said Robertson, "and I firmly believe with the aid the United States gives the Britons will win sooner or later."

Invited to be one of the principal speakers at the 14th annual session of the Georgia Press Institute to be held here next month, he had to decline as he will be returning to England at the time.

He was confident this generation of the English people is the bravest and most courageous of any in the history of England. "The people themselves, the persons behind the scenes, will eventually win this war for England," he said, hastily adding,

"they are brave and are real fighters."

As a newspaperman, Robertson said correspondents are restricted greatly by British censorship. "However, the British censors are more lenient than those of other countries, and full trust can be put in the daily communiques issued by the government. Everyone wants to help us get our stories through, and since the war began, the American people have been well posted on the activities."

Mr. Robertson is vacationing at present in his "home town" at Clemson, South Carolina, and at the same time preparing material for a book.

He returned to Clemson this morning immediately after speaking to students in the University chapel.

BACKING NECESSARY FOR EUROPEAN DEMOCRACY.

AUGUSTA, Ga., Jan. 30.—(P)—Democracy cannot survive on the European continent without the backing of strong democracies elsewhere, says Sir Morgan Webb, British parliamentary secretary for the Monetary Committee.

He expressed this view in a talk to the Executives' Club of Augusta last night.

"Only on the Atlantic coast where the influence of the British navy has been felt did democracy go strong," he said.

"In the Baltic, closed to us for a hundred years, the Prussian philosophy has wrecked the freedom that democracy implies."

Thomson Man Dies In Flaming Auto

THOMSON, Ga., Jan. 30.—(P)—Arthur Bruce Houston, 33-year-old Thomson man, was burned to death yesterday when trapped in his blazing automobile on the Gibson-Warrenton highway about two miles from Gibson, State Highway Patrol officers reported.

Children Receive Bicycle 'Licenses'

LITHONIA, Ga., Jan. 30.—Bicycle "licenses," in the form of safety pledges issued by the state patrol, were awarded this week to 114 school children who successfully passed "riders' tests."

An examination covering traffic regulations, the rules governing bicyclists, road test, and a bicycle inspection were points passed by the boys and girls to make them eligible for "licenses."

Bicycle riders who hang onto moving cars, stunt on busy streets or break other safety rules will be asked to give up their cards as a penalty.

The safety drive was sponsored by the library committee of the Lithonia Woman's Club.

Strike Settled At Army Air Center in Ohio

Labor Row Had Tied Up $1,500,000 Ohio Expansion Program.

By The United Press.

A strike which had tied up a $1,500,000 expansion program at Wright Field, Army aviation experiment center at Dayton, Ohio, was settled last night and U. S. conciliators were attempting to effect settlement of other strikes which had halted production at plants with contracts for defense program materials.

Settlement of the Wright field strike was announced by Conciliator Michael J. Crosetto. He said that between 400 and 500 workers involved, members of the Dayton Building Trades Council (AFL) would return to work Friday morning, permitting resumption of work on a construction program at the field.

Approximately 18,000 workers were participating in the other strikes, the largest of which have closed the International Harvester Company tractor plant at Chicago and the Allis Chalmers Manufacturing Company plant at Milwaukee. Production on defense orders in hundreds of other plants throughout the nation was progressing smoothly.

Separate Parleys.

Late Thursday, three federal conciliators began separate conferences with representatives of the Allis-Chalmers Company and 7,800 members of the United Automobile Workers (CIO). The union men have been on strike nine days in demand for wage increases and an all-union shop. Conciliator David T. Roadley was attempting to arrange a

Bluejackets Work In Labor Dispute

SAN DIEGO, Cal., Jan. 30.—(P)

Thirty Navy bluejackets took over certain activities at the Martinolich Boat Company today after a labor dispute halted work on five boats for the Navy.

The Navy working party was supplemented by caretaker crews of three tugboats being converted into minesweepers. The men concentrated on fitting out one sweeper scheduled to start trial runs within a few days. They made no effort to operate other yard facilities.

Two new minesweepers also are building at the plant. Tony Martinolich, company manager, termed the labor dispute a strike, and said it had been called by the San Diego Building & Construction Trades Council in an effort to obtain a closed shop.

union-company conference in the hope of effecting a settlement of a strike of 5,500 members of the Farm Equipment Workers' Organizing Committee (CIO) at the harvester tractor plant. The strike was called in protest against alleged refusal of company officials to discuss wage demands with the FEWOC.

The situation in brief on other disputes: Mobile, Ala.—Strike of 3,400 members of a CIO shipbuilders' union against the Alabama Drydock & Shipbuilding Company still was stalemated, despite submission of revised demands, including one for approval of a new contract. The strike has halted work on vessels of the United States Navy and British shippers.

Resumes Talks. Cleveland.—A conciliator resumed conferences looking toward settlement of a strike of 600 members of the United Automobile Workers (CIO) at the Standard Tool Company. The conciliator was seeking to have the men return to work pending negotiations on demands for wage increases and a bargaining contract.

U. S. Rejects Low Ford Bid On Labor Issue

Action Sets Precedent as Company Loses Truck Contract.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 30.—(P)

In an action believed to set a precedent, the War Department today rejected a bid from the Ford Motor Company for a contract involving 11,781 half-ton trucks because, it said, he "excepted as to the labor clauses."

The Ford company submitted the lowest bid among 155 firms, but the award was made to the Fargo Motor Corporation, of Detroit, which bid $10,298,128.

Last month it was announced that every invitation for bids for the procurement of military supplies must contain a clause saying that a statement of labor policy adopted by the Defense Commission and approved by President Roosevelt, shall be the guide in the awarding of contracts.

This statement of policy asserted that all work done under defense contracts should be in compliance with federal statutes (such as the Wagner act, the Walsh-Healey act setting labor standards for government contractors and the wage-hour act).

It was not disclosed just what part of the "labor clauses" Ford considered objectionable. The Ford company has been engaged in a battle in the courts with the National Labor Relations Board, which has accused it of violating the Wagner act.

Sidney Hillman, vice president of the CIO and associate director of the office of production management, objected last year to the award of a $1,387,500 order for 1,500 midget scout cars to the Ford company, on the ground that the contract lacked certain labor safeguards.

The War Department, however, allowed the contract to stand. The company also has been given a $122,323,030 contract for airplane engines, over CIO protests.

FORD ATTORNEY PROTESTS U. S. REJECTION OF BID DETROIT, Jan. 30.—(P)—The War Department's rejection of a Ford Motor Company bid on a defense contract because of company objection to "labor clauses" brought criticism tonight from a Ford representative and approbation from a CIO union official.

I. A. Gapizzi, Ford Company attorney, charged inclusion of certain labor clauses was "strictly an arbitrary action taken at the insistence of labor groups" and said the company would enter "the same objections" if invited to bid on other defense contracts containing "the same restrictions."

Michael F. Widman Jr., chairman of the Ford organizing campaign of the United Auto Workers (CIO), said the rejection of the Ford bid meant that the government "has come around in practice to its professed position that violators of the law are not entitled to government contracts."

The Ford attorney said that "labor groups have the ear of certain officials in Washington, whereas the Ford Motor Company does not," and disclosed that the Ford bid on the contract in question was $250,000 lower than that of the firm which was awarded the contract.

Germans Hurl Heaviest Day Raids in Weeks

LONDON, Jan. 30.—(P)—German bombers stabbed at London, Dover, the eastern midlands and southeast England today with the heaviest daylight raids in weeks, shooting down some of the big bags in Dover's balloon barrage and causing an undetermined number of casualties.

Three alerts were sounded in the capital up to dusk. The ministry of home security announced that some shops and houses were damaged. Officers' quarters adjoining a London hospital were struck, and several persons were believed to have been buried in the wreckage. One body was recovered.

All members of the crew of a German bomber were killed when the plane was shot down over Essex.

In one district, a school was reported hit, and in the east midlands, Britons said, a low-flying raider machinegunned a village street with no reported casualties.

Royal Air Force bombers struck at objectives in northwestern Germany during the night, an official announcement said, with the big naval base at Wilhelmshaven bearing the brunt.

The luftwaffe failed to follow up the day raiding with night attacks. At a late hour there were no reports of activity in any part of the country, even though there was less fog on the Strait of Dover and visibility was much better than in the day.

Stalin Calls 500,000 Boys Of Ages 14, 15

Youths Conscripted for 3 Years' Technical, Practical Training.

By WALTER DURANTY.

Copyright, 1941, by North American Newspaper Alliance.

MOSCOW, Jan. 30.—(By Wire)—The Red army is the pride of the U. S. S. R. In the old days when boys were called up for service they went sadly; but now when the call comes they know it is a fine thing to be a Red soldier, fier or sailor. They will be well treated, well fed and well clothed and get good teaching, so they'll know what they will be fighting for if fight they must.

But the marshals and the leaders of the Red army didn't seem to be wholly pleased with it. The highest among them, Marshal Timoshenko, said frankly there was something wrong—too much stress on technic and not enough field training.

Then there was the question of precisely what role the Communist party or civilian control or the political department, as the Russians themselves call it, should play in army affairs. Its role, of course, is important because the army is an instrument of the state, not an autonomous state within a state, and therefore must be controlled. But not to the extent that you have divided authority and mixed orders. In such circumstances no army can function.

Room for Improvement. Anyway, as Marshal Timoshenko said, there was room for improvement in the Red Army, but no more divided authority. It is the biggest thing in the U. S. S. R. today, this adjustment of the Communist party, which really means civilian control or administration or executive control, to the Red army and, for that matter, to industry, too.

What they are doing now in the Red army is developing initiative and the energy of the junior ranks without losing the authority of the higher ranks—to make an efficient machine where the leader gives orders and the others, of course, obey, but do not become automatic or act without thought.

In war, as Marshal Timoshenko said—and every soldier knows it—you first of all must obey; but also think for yourself because battles often are won by men who think for themselves and fight it out in the last ditch.

That is what the Red army, fleet and air force are trying to achieve.

Confusion Avoided. As in the case of the Red army, the Soviet Communist party as the central power in the U. S. S. R. must exercise authority and control over all national activities. But it is a question in military and civilian affairs alike as to exercise that control as to obtain the maximum efficiency and avoid a divided authority or confusion of powers. In other words, the difference between help and interference.

Heavy industry, especially metallurgy, provides the Russians claim, the present instance of success in solving this delicate problem. Newspapers have just announced the winner of a title for the best metallurgical plant in the U. S. S. R. in a nation-wide competition during the last quarter of 1940.

U. S. Individual Income Placed At 74 Billion

Purchasing Power Great-est in History, Secretary Jones Declares.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 30.—(P)—Reporting that income payments to individuals totaled $74,000,000,000 last year, Secretary Jesse H. Jones said today that Americans had more purchasing power in 1940 than ever before.

He said that while the estimated cash income of Americans was 10 per cent below 1939, prices also were lower, so that the 1940 income could buy as much as or more than the 1939 income.

On a dollar basis, the income of Americans last year was higher than any year other than 1929. Jones noted, moreover, that, due to the defense program, income payments were rising rapidly at the end of 1940. As the nation went into 1941, he said, wages and other income were being paid out at a rate equivalent to $78,000,000,000 per year.

Wages and salaries accounted for $47,000,000,000 of the 1940 total, compared with $44,400,000,000 in 1939. This gain was more than the average 6 per cent of 1940 over 1939.

Income payments to individuals differs slightly from national income. It includes some items, such as relief payments, which are not counted in national income. On the other hand, national income includes additions to business surpluses which are not included in income payments to individuals.

winners stress the vital share the Communist party organizations have in conducting a huge "Socialist competition" to stir the enthusiasm of the workers and pointing out the weakness and suggesting improvements. Awards emphasize the fact the programs have been fulfilled steadily without "storm drives," at the end of each month, and that progress has been maintained during January. Labor discipline generally is improved, partly as the result of the somewhat stringent decrees issued last year, but also by the greater incentive in the shape of more consumers' goods. In this respect high hopes are placed in the recent decree signed by Josef Stalin and Premier Molotov, jointly laying down the foundations for a vastly increased provincial production of consumers' goods, which also will lessen the strain on transportation. Another measure, expected to be useful, is the calling up so far of about 500,000 youngsters from 14 to 15 years old for three years of technical and practical industrial training. These boys wear smart, dark uniforms and appear as healthy and cheerful as cadets anywhere. And those with whom I talked seemed to be delighted to exchange life in small towns and villages for that in the big industrial centers. They get holidays like other school boys and will form "cadres in the Soviet industrial army." Simultaneously, however, there has been a widespread cut in quoted stipends of state assistance to the older students, who, subject to less discipline, sometimes neglected their work. This cut seems also a part of the general economy program. These financial measures are another sign of the present strenuous Soviet effort to set its whole house in order. Thus there is going on a weeding-out of excessive or incompetent personnel throughout Russian industry, trade, banks and, where possible, agriculture.

Methods in our stores change . . . not principles or obligations

Towering crystal bottles, bright with colored liquids, were the drug store's window display when Grandfather was a boy. Those glittering bottles promised little to compare with a modern store in stocks or in service—but they were symbols of reliability and integrity, trusted signs of an establishment which boasted a public obligation—even to matters of life and death. Lane Drug Stores have kept the pace of progress, in variety of merchandise and versatility of service. Lane Drug Stores also keep aflame that time-honored spirit of community obligation. ATLANTA, GA., JANUARY 31, 1941.

Who Will Win the War

Winston Churchill, premier of Great Britain, recently stated that British war factories and agriculture have a stronger claim than the fighting services on manpower. Ernest Bevin, representing labor in the British cabinet, is initiating a gigantic speed-up effort in Britain, with first stress laid on complete utilization of all industrial capacity. Bevin is supported, in this move, by the great majority of both employers and British trade union leaders.

Thus the leaders of Britain's war effort emphatically reveal their realization that the workers in the war factories are the ones upon whom, in final analysis, the determination of victory or defeat must rest. This is a war of skills, not of mass killings, and it will be won in the workshops and on the training fields.

In Libya the forces under General Wavell have demonstrated that speed in action, by highly mechanized forces, can bring victory over large bodies of enemy troops without heavy casualty lists for the attackers. Australian casualties in the entire campaign, through the capture of Bardia, were less than 300, and only 27 of these were killed in action or died of wounds.

All this emphasizes the important role that American industry can take in deciding the war and, additionally, of the importance of speed in opening the floodgates to permit our supplies to reach Britain in time.

The British feel, it is reported, they have already achieved superiority over the Germans in quality of equipment and in the effective training of their fighting manpower. All needed now is a closer approach to equality, or superiority, in the quantity of the equipment. This America, alone, can give. The war will be determined on the question of whether or not American equipment can get across the Atlantic in time.

Thus it is evident that the issue rests upon two factors. First, upon the speed with which congress enacts the lease-lend bill and, secondly, on the speed with which American industry produces and ships the vital supplies after that bill is passed.

Every hour of unnecessary debate in congressional committees or upon the floor of either house is an hour given to Hitler. Every inefficiency in industrial management, every strike by labor, is a victory for the forces of Nazidom. For time is the high essence of the situation. The war is being fought, today, with minutes and hours as the weapons and speed or delay on this side of the Atlantic are as important as any conceivable strategic advantage on the actual scenes of conflict.

A bizarre anomaly grows up in our relation to the big dollops abroad: We are still short of war, and even shorter of neutrality.

Wanted: Volunteers

Some time ago an Atlanta office force wrote to Washington asking that they be used, for one hour a day, in aid of the national defense program. Whether anything definite came of the offer has not been reported.

There is, however, a very definite work for defense which is going on, all the time, in Atlanta and which is in vital need of volunteer workers. Those who can give an hour a day will be joyfully welcomed. Even those who can give only one hour a week will not be despised.

The work is the making of surgical dressings, both for the United States Army and for Britain. It is carried on at the Red Cross branch at 850 West Peachtree street. Millions of these dressings must be made and it will take many more willing volunteer hands of Atlanta women if the city's share of the essential task is to be completed.

In one hour any one may make six surgical dressings. Those six dressings may some day save a soldier's life. It is work that must be done and work that is of direct aid to the defense effort of the nation.

In a western lawsuit, the proposition is set up that love is a type of insanity. It fits in with the Axis attitude, that international good feeling is nuts.

Despair, as overheard this morning on the bus: "Nothing is as it used to be, if it ever was."

River Plate Conference

The River Plate countries are considering proposals which in final application would make the entire South American continent a self-sufficient unit having widespread repercussions upon the economic structure of the world.

Designed primarily to end the subservience of South America to foreign economic systems—and possibly antagonistic foreign ideologies—the proposals envisage the creation of a customs union among Argentina, Brazil, Uruguay, Paraguay and Bolivia and the unilateral granting by Argentina, Brazil and Uruguay of most favored nation treatment to Paraguay and Bolivia, South America's two land-locked states. The extension of the customs union through analogous accords to other countries is also under consideration.

From the first, the greatest handicap to the development of the union would be a weakness in the industrial structure of each of the countries. But this weakness is not necessarily fatal to the basic conception because it has been demonstrated that Argentina and Brazil especially have been able to develop national industries of many kinds.

In a sense, however, the proposals before the River Plate economic conference stand as a warning to the United States—now the largest exporter to Argentina and Brazil—and to Great Britain, both dependent in large part upon manufactured articles which South America does not produce.

On the other hand, there are signs of brighter relations which would preclude the eventual shutting out of these markets. Each of these South American countries has lately been producing and exporting articles that heretofore have come from the countries of central Europe, notably handicrafts and fine foodstuffs and wines. Atlantans in recent weeks have been purchasing, for example, Argentine Blue cheese, an excellent substitute for Roquefort, and champagne from the same country which by some standards will measure with the best France can produce.

There are other steps that can be taken, such as the removal of the unnecessary ban on importation of Argentine meats because of the prevalence of hoof-and-mouth disease in an isolated area of that country. The quantity of the imports would have little or no effect on American producers and would have a profound effect on the attitude of the Argentine people as a whole toward this country.

In many ways the economic status of the River Plate countries can be compared to that of our own south. They are economic vassals of rich industrial areas too blind to see that a balanced economy in the affected areas would have a beneficial effect not limited to the vassal section. Happily, they have the freedom of action which the south does not, and the proposals before the River Plate conference—an outgrowth of the co-operation started by the Pan-American Congress—are simply the handwriting on the wall. The Americas have learned the basic principles of international co-operation and the River Plate conference is a step toward placing that co-operation on a working plane. The United States must decide that selfish principles can be shelved if it is to see the full flower of its "Good Neighbor" policy. Reciprocal trade treaties have formed the groundwork for this co-operation. They must be extended and trade barriers must fall wherever possible. We have before us the shape of the world to come if Britain holds out.

A little more of this and they'll be renaming the Duce's high horse Shorty.

Editorial Symposium

THE ENIGMA OF RUSSIA

Lifting of the "moral embargo" against Russia follows the report that the Soviet and Germany have concluded a trade agreement, a puzzling duet of events the significance of which is plumbied by American newspapers seeking a key to the international circumstances. "The course of the administration is worse than unimoral; it is militarily stupid," asserts the KNICKERBOCKER NEWS of Albany, which points out that "We are sanctioning trading with Russia at the very time Russia is dickering with Argentina to buy grain to feed the German armies," and suggests, "That puts us in a swell position to use our influence against Argentina aiding Germany with grain, doesn't it?" And the MILWAUKEE JOURNAL doesn't "like to see Uncle Samuel make a sap in the crafty Russian technique of playing one nation off against another" and views with suspicion the removal of the embargo, a suspicion "based on the lack of good faith shown by the Soviet Union in the past," and "on the chronic perfidy of Communists and their sworn enemy for the United States and for every basic principle of democracy."

The HARTFORD COURANT sees the lifting of the embargo as "part of a vast diplomatic maneuver designed to strip Germany of its allies, willing and unwilling. Its chances of success are problematical, but evidently the Department of State considers them good enough to gamble on." While "On the face of it" the lifting of the embargo "seems inconsistent with our policy of all to help Britain defend herself against the Axis, since Russia is an admitted channel for supplies to Germany," says the SPOKESMAN-REVIEW of Spokane, appearances may be deceptive and the bonds between Russia and Germany may not be so strong as proclaimed in Moscow and Berlin but that a friendly gesture from the United States at this time might help to weaken them, especially in view of the possibilities for friction between the Soviet Union and the Nazis over maneuvers in the Balkans.

THE CAPITAL PARADE

By JOSEPH ALSOP AND ROBERT KINTNER.

NEW WHITE HOUSE TECHNIQUE WASHINGTON, Jan. 30.—There was very real long-term significance, only imperfectly disclosed in the news dispatches, in the President's Monday night meeting with the Democratic and Republican congressional leaders. When the President gathered the leaders at the White House fireside for after-dinner discussion of amendments to the lease-lend bill, he broke sharply with his own past. Furthermore, the break was intentional, was made at the express request of Speaker of the House Sam Rayburn, and portends similar gestures of sweet reasonableness in the future.

In the past, as everyone knows, the presidential manner towards congress has been more imperious than sweetly reasonable. As the war crisis has developed, to be sure, he has tended more and more to consult rather than command. But the consultations have commonly taken place only when he felt he was in a tight spot, as he did, for example, in July, 1939, when he held the famous and fruitless bipartisan conference of senate chieftains to try to obtain prompt repeal of the arms embargo.

Now, urged on by men like Rayburn, Senator Walter F. George and Senator James F. Byrnes, the President is consciously restoring what used to be regarded as the normal legislative-executive relationship. As every moderately able President has always done, he still reserves to himself the task of initiating broad policies. But when it comes to writing his policies into the law, he is also beginning to consult and confer, to take advice and to mull over proposed compromises. In short, he is beginning to allow congress to perform its proper function, of presenting policies in the way most acceptable to the largest number of people. He might have saved himself much trouble by doing so before.

LISTENING TO THE LEADERS

The episode of the Monday night meeting was a striking case in point. After the introduction of the lease-lend bill, Speaker Rayburn canvassed the house for reactions. He found widespread demand for four types of change: (1) A two-year time limit; (2) a specific anti-convooy provision; (3) a provision calling on the President to make tri-monthly reports to congress on use of the powers granted in the bill, and (4) a provision requiring Army and Navy participation in all decisions on release war materials to other powers. Senator George, as chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee in charge of the bill in the senate, discovered the same reactions at the other end of the capitol.

None of the types of change desired by congress was crippling to the bill. All but the time-limit amendment were offensive to the President, however. The anti-convooy provision he regarded as unnecessary, while the other two he considered as infringements on his constitutional power in the field of foreign relations.

Nevertheless, when Rayburn suggested that a leaders' meeting to discuss amendments would be a useful step, the President welcomed the proposal and promptly authorized him to make the necessary arrangements. At the meeting itself, while no commitments were asked or given, he gave every appearance of assent when Rayburn and the chairman of the House Foreign Affairs Committee read drafts of the four amendments. He also told the gathering, extremely emphatically, that he was ready to consider any other amendments, from whatever source, which did not negate his bill's objectives.

Both Democrats and Republicans were impressed by his showing of willingness to meet congress halfway. As the amendments were introduced the next day in the house, and word of the President's new attitude spread through the capitol, the atmosphere improved greatly. The meeting had an obviously healthy effect.

HOW THE BILL WAS WRITTEN

Despite the isolationist outcry to the contrary, the President adopted his new attitude at the beginning of the lease-lend bill's history. In the past, when such great measures were afoot, it was his custom to prepare them first, and then to confront even his most intimate congressional henchmen with the fait accompli. This time, instead, he revealed his plan to Senate Majority Leader Alben W. Barkley, Senators George, Byrnes and Pat Harrison, and Speaker Rayburn and House Majority Leader John McCormack. They talked it over with him at length and the original conception was considerably revised.

Then, again on the motion of Speaker Rayburn, recourse was had to the legislative drafting service, an official agency of the house, where members have their measures prepared. The lawyers of the legislative drafting service were presented with the statement of objectives and methods agreed on between the President and the leaders, and with a quantity of factual data prepared at the State, War, Navy and Treasury Departments. The drafting job was done by Middleton Beaman, chief house drafting officer, and the successful drafts were submitted for editing and suggestions, not to the White House, but to the congressional leaders. Thus the much-criticized original lease-lend bill was a congressional product except with respect to the policy it implemented.

Republicans, to be sure, were not consulted in this preparatory period. House Minority Leader Joseph W. Martin was considered too grimly isolationist to be a useful adviser, while the acting Republican chieftain in the senate, Warren Austin, of Vermont, did not wish to be called to the White House for fear of losing his authority with his fellows. But, on the whole, now that events may be seen in some perspective, the initial hubbalooboo over the lease-lend bill looks a little excitable.

The powers granted are far less than the powers over foreign affairs reserved to the President in the constitution. The method of preparing the bill was far less dictatorial than methods often employed in the past. And the spirit shown by the White House is conciliatory rather than hectoring.

Those Who Serve.

Many of us are inclined to think, because we have not been called to some more spectacular task than the routine of our former days, that we are not serving the nation, and freedom's cause, in the emergency that now stares both in the face.

We consider that representatives and officials of the people in Washington are serving, for the nation, and freedom's cause, in the emergency that now stares both in the face.

We see others, about us, engaged in what we think essential services for defense, or for aid to Britain, and we are not dissatisfied that we are not in uniform, are not making planes or shells or tanks in some great factory, are not "doing something" definite in the big job.

But aren't we mistaken? Isn't it still true, as Milton said, "they also serve who only stand and wait."

A Letter From Rockmart.

These thoughts were started by a letter just received from Rockmart. Inclosed with the letter is an article about Miss Anne Brumby, superintendent of Polk county schools from 1924 to 1940. Retirement was forced last year, because of impaired health and the necessity of rest.

The article and the accompanying letter are in appreciation of Miss Brumby's service to Polk county, through her devoted work in her daily task, as superintendent. It is a eulogy that is worthy of wide attention, yet, unfortunately, it is far too long for publication here.

I know nothing of Miss Brumby, yet I don't doubt for a moment that the eulogy was well deserved. I know, somehow, that she gave something rather wonderful to Polk county, to the youngsters who passed through her schools, to their parents and to the entire county. For that is the habit of Georgia school teachers. There are some wonderful men and women in the roster of Georgia's public school faculties.

And the point I want to make is that Miss Brumby, and hundreds of her confederates, have contributed much to their nation, have already done their share in the national defense effort. For, could there be any defense, or any nation worth defending, if the children of that nation had not been wisely and sympathetically taught in the principles of American freedom as well as in the elements of education and culture? Who can say that the school teachers are not serving, at all times, emergency or not, in the front line of the defense of the real America?

There Are Many Others.

You, working in some office and feeling envious of your erstwhile desk mate, now in the navy, can serve as well as he. For, after all, the measure of service is not so much what we do as how we do it. By carrying on the work at hand with renewed efficiency and perfection, you can serve at your desk, my friend.

The policeman at an Atlanta street intersection may not find his daily job so dramatic as that of an air raid warden in London, yet, he, too, is working to save lives, to protect the innocent, just as dead, you know, if death comes under the wheels of a truck in Atlanta, as if it comes in a screaming bomb from some German bomber.

The student in school or college can serve, nobly. By sincere and honest effort to learn and to understand more. By remembering that it is education for which all go to college, education to make the individual a more valuable citizen to his country in after life. Serve by better and more instructive study in your chosen line.

The Mistress Of The House.

The housewife, operating her home on smooth, efficient lines, may serve as well as the nurse in the army hospital or the woman workers in trim khaki.

The woman who makes home a better and more enjoyable place in which to live, who creates meals that increase the physical well-being of her family, who provides that mental and spiritual lift that stimulates her folks to better effort in their own tasks, is serving the nation, too.

All of us who will try to do our daily jobs better, and thus to contribute to a finer and greater appreciation of life in this country, are serving in the best possible way.

For we are helping to create a nation so fine, so perfect in its way of life, that it will be more

Bosses Run Racket NEW YORK, Jan. 30.—The great pick-and-shovel shake-down department of the American Federation of Labor, which at present is extorting some vast sums from horny-handed American toilers of the poorest bracket, is governed by an exclusive, self-perpetuating group of labor racketeers who never confide in the rank-and-file members, or slaves, Joe Moreschi, the president of the racket, known officially as the International Hod-Carriers' Building and Common Laborers' Union, just eased into the presidency by vote or conspiracy of the executive board on the death of Dominick D'Alessandro in 1929, and since the time of the last international convention of the shake, 31 years ago, no vacancy in any international office has been filled by popular vote. The bosses just get together and decide to cut in on the racket without saying aye, yes or no to members.

Possibly no such decision was submitted to the members or any elected representatives of the members for some years before that, but a span of 31 years without elections, conventions or reports to the membership surely is enough to prove the character of the racket which controls 250,000 stiff in all parts of the country and bleeds out of their small and intermittent earnings upwards of $6,000,000 a year.

Of this enormous shake the international gets a little over a million dollars a year in per capita taxes at the rate of 35 cents per head per month, plus $5 out of each initiation fee—provided, of course, that the gangsters who have charge of some of the locals don't forget to kick in.

License

It is unlikely that the hoodlums would be so foolish as to hold out, however, because the boys in charge of the international may easily cancel the charter of an unethical gorilla, which, after all, is a valuable license to graft from employers and extort from workers.

The year, with the locals shaking down ex-members of the WPA force, farmers and casual laborers for permission to work on cantonments and other rearmament projects, the international should collect at least 50,000 and perhaps twice that many $5 dividends on the initiation fees. So the total receipts of Moreschi's office should run well over $1,250,000.

They just don't bother to tell the rank and file what they do with all this money. They don't like to worry the poor, dumb rank and file with big figures. But they do pay a modest office expense, including the cost of charters, or racketeering licenses, for enterprising gorillas starting new locals, and there is a theory that they sometimes pay a death benefit of from $50 to $200, although in Chicago, when that subject was mentioned to members of the mob, they offered no book figures but just smiled.

Theoretical Some of the local hoodlums have a theoretical $5 a week accident benefit for members injured on the job, but, again referring to Chicago, the 25 local unions were all held in the single ownership of an old-time gunman of the South Side prostitution trade named Mike Carozzo, and he was bashful about his generosity.

Incidentally, although $200 is the maximum theoretical death benefit, after a man passes his sixtieth birthday, though he may have been a member all his working life, the maximum drops to $50. As death becomes more probable the racket, with its vast take from the earnings of the sucker, shies away from him. Of course it will be discovered that William Green, the president of the American Federation of Labor, has been utterly unaware of the nature of this racket all this time, Mr. Green being a man who likes to think good thoughts of his associates in the cause of labor with an upper-case L.

A Dinner In Boston

But in May, 1931, Mr. Green was one of those invited to a testimonial dinner in Boston in honor of Minnie Green, the president of the rights, and dues, of the pick-and-shovel stiff prepared to shove off for Bristol, England, as a fraternal delegate of the AFL to the British Trades Union Congress. Mr. Green did not attend, but Frank H. McCarthy, New England organizer of the AFL, officially represented him at a feast adorned by the presence of army and navy officers, the Italian consul and other persons of rank and note.

Mr. Moreschi was praised as "a man and leader of men," and sailed away for England to view the quaintly scrupulous financial and electoral customs of unionism there, bearing in his pocket "a substantial check" from his devoted followers.

and more worth giving our all in its defense. Ideals are worth fighting for—ideals in practice are worth dying for.

And Fifty Years Ago.

ONE WORD MORE

By RALPH MCGILL.

WHEN GOVERNMENT GETS SICK At dinners and at those 4 to 6 o'clock affairs there always are those who wag a solemn head and say, "Well, we certainly are seeing history made, aren't we?" I guess we are. History always is being made. But I wonder if anyone has noticed that right here at home we have, on a small scale, an illustration of what has happened, on large scales, in other places in the world?

Today the senate of our state legislature is expected to concur in the action of the house and give to the Governor what amounts to authoritarian or dictatorial control over state finances. It really is dictatorial power of a most unusual sort.

Is there any opposition? None to speak of. Is the body politic quivering with excitement? Not at all. What is the public sentiment concerning it? Favorable or apathetic. Why is all this true?

Because government got sick in Georgia. Because it was, and is, sick the people believe their state's financial condition requires drastic and far-reaching control vested in one man. Therefore, they are in favor of a movement which restricts the tradition of the democratic process. They are not worried about this restriction. Indeed, they think it proper.

Government is sick. And men do not live by bread alone, but by government and by bread, as far as realities are concerned. And once government becomes sick the people become fearful.

If our state government should become worse the people would be willing to lose even more of the control of government as heretofore entrusted to their representatives.

It places a great responsibility on the Governor not to let any of those about him, who would use him, use this power for evil. It squarely is up to the Governor to use this powerful medicine to make the state well; to cure its sickness.

OH, SAY, CAN YOU SEE?

But, I think it proper to ask, isn't it possible to see what happens anywhere and everywhere when government gets sick. Germany had a sick government. The new republic, after World War One, was betrayed by the Allies. It was given to a people with no political background. It represented, to the returning soldier, the symbol of his defeat. It was detested by the old junkies. It did not supply the needs of the common people, so they distrusted it and its leaders. All the while the political maneuverings of France and England bled it white and refused care for the emergencies.

Well before Hitler came there was the time when Gustav Stresemann went to Sir John Simon and pleaded for some assistance, some little grant of arms and a return of some portion of the Rhineland. It was just before a meeting at Geneva. Sir John promised.

And when Stresemann got to Geneva he hurried to Sir Ramsey MacDonald.

"Did Sir John give you my message?" "What message?" "The government got sicker and sicker. When Stresemann was gone the people did not mourn him. Already they disliked him as one who had tried to treat with the conquerors and who had been spurned by them."

And already Austria, Chamberlain, as clever as brother Neville was naive, was writing: "There is, I admit, serious anxiety as to the trend of policy of the present German government and the effect of their daily propaganda on the people."

This was well before Hitler. And when the time came for Hitler to make his bid, the German government was sick, desperately sick, and the people surrendered every one of their liberties. It must be remembered that Hitler did not take power by force. He used trickery and propaganda, he burned down the Reichstag to create an "emergency," and the people voted him all he wanted and the Reichstag itself voted to disband.

How sick was the Italian government when the "Black Shirts" marched? And a fearful and trembling Benito Mussolini rode in on a train to see how his bully boys would be received?

Well, sick enough. So terribly sick it received that army of thugs and adventurers and gave over the government to them.

And now we know that government was sick in Poland and in Czechoslovakia and in France and in England when the great crisis arrived.

GEORGIA FACES THE FUTURE

Here in Georgia we have done something which seems necessary. It is such a small illustration of the greater things that it seems worth the pointing out. We have no dictator and none who wants to be. But the illustration is there.

We have a Governor pledged to good government. He is strong enough to deliver it. We have an honest legislature, mindful of the needs of the people.

Our government is sick. And so we are willing to grant unusual powers in an effort to cure it. The real enemies of democracy are not so much Fifth Columnists and saboteurs. Our real enemies are those who break down government, who betray the methods and the uses of democracy. Public officials who misuse their office do more to destroy or make decadent the democratic way than all the Fifth Columnists put together.

So, Georgia faces the future, having by democratic methods given away some of the established rights of its legislative branches in an effort to cure its illnesses.

The Best Revenge For a Customer's

Insults Is To Get His Money

By ROBERT QUILLEN.

Jesse Jones, world's greatest lender, banker to democracy, second power in America, is now blessed with many friends; but the root of success is often strewn with the wreckage of beautiful friendships, and the discarded friends become enemies.

Jones has enemies, most of them of long standing. They are men who "trusted" him to be generous, soft or charitable in matters of business.

These enemies call him "Ten-Per-Cent Jones" or "Jesse James Jones," and responsible magazines make vague reference to "hard deals" and "sharp deals" somewhere in the great man's past.

It is never charged that Jones was dishonest or dishonorable or deceptive or treacherous. He was merely hard and sharp—which means that he played the game of business to win.

Business is the game of making money—and the only way to make big money. Yet it isn't the money that fascinates successful men; it is the game itself, and the fun of playing it well enough to win in hard competition.

Those who enjoy games and play them well are usually successful in business; those who are bored by games find little pleasure in business and less reward. There are exceptions, of course, but the rule holds true.

Jones himself is a wizard at poker and bridge. He glances at opponents as though reading their minds; gauges the strength of opposing cards and makes snap decisions that are uncannily right. He plays games to win.

Would any opponent be so simple as to expect him to be generously charitable in a poker game—to throw in a superior hand or refuse to take the pot because opponents are poor or unskilled?

The trick in business is to get a profit—buy low and sell high—to get more than you paid—whether the commodity is lumber, electric power, the skill of hired help, real estate or pencils. And those who succeed play the game as impersonally as they play bridge or poker or tennis.

Emotions and personal feelings have no place in the game. You play it fairly, or soon lose out for want of reputation; but you play to win and never let opinions interfere with taking a trick.

Why should one be too modest or bashful or proud to press the sale of his wares? Is he too bashful to play his cards?

And why drop a good customer who is hateful and insulting? Ignore his talk and get his money. The champ never lets an opponent rattle him with talk.

OFF THE RECORD—By Ed Reed

Good Morning

By Dr. Louie D. Newton.

"Jesus and Broken Personalities" is the title of a very interesting book by a Georgian, Brookside Stillwell Wells, of Hapeville. Her husband, Dr. W. Frank Wells, is a well-known Atlanta doctor. The book is published by the Fleming H. Revell Company. The price is $2.

There is a saying of the ancients to the effect that it is a good thing to be well born. And all lovers of books will agree that it is a good thing for a book to be well printed. This is true with regard to "Jesus and Broken Personalities." It is a fine example of one of the finest crafts. The type is easy on the eyes, most attractively put together on a fine grade of book paper. And that is all to the good.

Mrs. Wells has done an interesting thing in this book—painting a picture of the Crystal Christ as He stands in the midst of the personalities most intimately related to Him in His brief earthly ministry. All of the incidents in the book are taken from the Gospel of John.

It is a story book—the intriguing story of how Jesus sought to help broken personalities, and, in most instances, how He succeeded. "Each of these persons at the time was insufficient, imperfect, or broken at some point, hence unfitted for us in God's Kingdom. Christ touches the sore spots, heals, restores and recreates."

Mrs. Wells does not force conclusions upon the reader. Rather, she tells the story, leaving the reader to draw the obvious lesson that the personalities with whom Jesus dealt are definitely typical and inclusive of any and every personality with whom we deal today; and just as He sought to redeem the individual and thus save society then, so does He today seek to build the Kingdom of God through redeemed individuals. The essential message of the New Testament: "Ye must be born again—ye must be born from above."

I repeat, it is a story book. And that is a sure method of appeal to reader interest on the part of all ages. Boys and girls will enjoy the book, and any book that boys and girls enjoy will have certain charm for adults. One reads on, page after page, eager to follow the narrative of how Nathaniel arose from his place under the bush to become one of the truest disciples of Jesus, and likewise throughout the 34 chapters Mrs. Wells holds the reader's interest as she paints this fascinating picture of the Crystal Christ remaking broken personalities.

Cold Weather
In Dixie Away
Back in 1899

Henry McIntosh in the Albany Herald discusses weather—an ever-ready subject for a columnist temporarily as devoid of ideas as an egg is of hair. Which is one reason I'm quoting it.

Mr. McIntosh recalls, with a shiver up and down his spine, in January a year ago, when he was caught in Nashville, Tenn., in a temperature of 10 below zero in town and 13 below at the airport—if anybody was nutty enough to be at the airport. And Mr. McIntosh, from south Georgia, was wearing shorts and thin overcoat. "But," writes Mr. McIntosh, "the all-time record for devastating weather in this section belongs to the first week of February, 1899. Then, and only then, did Albany and the region round about experience zero weather, with sleet and snow piling in heavy drifts. That blizzard killed vegetation which up to that time had been regarded as capable of withstanding any cold. It blasted water systems and brought business to a practical standstill. The temperature rose slowly, and traces of snow and sleet remained for more than a week."

"Buildings in this part of the country are not designed to withstand zero cold and blizzard winds. Neither is the average heating system. When that sort of weather hits us, we shiver through it as best we can."

Mr. McIntosh is most eminently correct about southern houses and southern heating.

Most around-zero comfort I've ever known was in New York and Chicago—indoors. Nearest I've ever come to freezing into a six-foot icicle was in Florida—when one of those every-now-and-then cold snaps arrived. Atlanta houses I know are fairly well protected against Old Man Weather. They have furnaces of one type or another. And Atlanta people don't kid themselves that "it never gets cold down here." We know it does.

$75 Per Theater Seat.

Broadway columnist says he heard of folk who paid $75 each for seats for the opening night of Gertrude Lawrence's new show—and questions their sanity. Especially as they could see it the next night for $4.40—and a better performance.

We are all crazy—but in different ways. But, as a comedian in the '90's used to sing: "It's nice to be crazy—it's so much fun."

That $75 per seat nuttiness reminds me of the one and only time I committed the chief crime of journalism—selling a pass. Or passes. But I was tempted and I fell.

Caruso was singing in opera at the Auditorium. In return for special publicity work outside my field I had obtained two passes in addition to my regular two as critic. I intended them for two daughters.

It was late afternoon when I strolled into a hotel for a chat with the room clerk about who was in town.

Big chap was registering. "What about a couple of tickets for the opera tonight?" he asked. The clerk regretfully stated there wasn't a seat to be had. Sold out from front row to the most remote seat in the balcony.

"Now, ain't that hell," said the visitor. "My wife took a notion she wanted to hear this guy Caruso sing. And what my wife wants she gets—or I never hear the last of it. So we drove all the way up here from near the Florida line so she could hear this guy Caruso sing. I don't know why. I'd rather hit a vaudeville show if there's one in town."

"Say," he continued. "See if you can't pick up a couple of tickets. Money's no object. I'll pay 50 bucks for a couple of tickets." The bellhop took his grips to the elevator. And I began thinking about relative values.

'Anything for Peace.'

"Do you suppose," I asked my friend at the desk, "that this nut would pay 50 bucks for two seats?" "He certainly would," said the clerk. "He's got more money than Carter had pills and he splashes it around."

"Call his room and ask him if he'll go to 55?" I asked. "I've got the seats—good ones. Fifty for me and five for you."

There was some delay. In the meantime I phoned home to the daughters. "Would you prefer to hear Caruso tonight or get a new dress?" I asked.

There was no hesitation. Each of them had heard the great Caruso a dozen times. They had been "supers" in a score of performances. He was their idol, yes. But an opera is only an opera and a new dress lasts longer.

The answer came down. "Sure, get those seats and charge $55 on my bill."

Best bit of the story, to me, is that I brought the two youngsters down to the Auditorium and sneaked them into the stage door, where they renewed old friendships and put on costumes and "walked on" in the big chorus numbers and heard Caruso—and split 50 bucks between them.

I have never been torn by remorse over that crime. The house was sold out. I'd earned those passes. If I'd used them as intended it would have made no difference in the box-office count.

And I helped a chap from south Georgia keep peace in his household. I'd like to do it again—but there are no more Carusos.

Negotiated Peace Not Popular With Americans, Poll Reveals

Only One Out of Seven Favors Idea; Many Feel 'Hitler Peace' Would Not Last; British Opposed, Too.

By DR. GEORGE GALLUP
Director, American Institute of Public Opinion.
Copyright, 1941

PRINCETON, N. J., Jan. 30.—Colonel Lindberg's statement before the house committee that he favors a "negotiated peace" at this time between Germany and England raises the question, now many Americans share this viewpoint? How many want the British to try to make the best peace they can now, instead of continuing the war?

Today's survey put the following question to a cross-section of continuing the war:

"Which of these two things do you think England should do now—try to make the best possible peace now with Germany, or keep on fighting in the hope of defeating Germany. The results are:

Try to Make Peace Now	15%
Keep on Fighting	79%
Don't Know	6%

It is a curious fact that in this country, thousands of miles away from the bombs and bloodshed of Britain more people want an Anglo-German peace than in embattled Britain itself. Last December the British Institute of Public Opinion took a poll in England on the idea of a negotiated peace with Germany, and found that only 7 per cent of British voters favored such a plan, despite four months of savage air-raids.

The same survey also found that the temper of the British people was such that as many as 13 per cent would report to the authorities any person who even suggested making a negotiated peace.

An analysis of the reasons why most American voters oppose a negotiated peace between Germany and England shows two main attitudes—that Germany "must be stopped now," and that a peace made by Hitler would not last "because his pledge is worthless."

Typical of many was this comment of a textile worker in North Carolina: "Any peace now would serve only as a temporary advantage for Hitler to recuperate so that he could resume his program of world destruction. It would be just a rest period." Another voter, a dress manufacturer in West Virginia, adds:

"If England makes peace now, she will only have to fight Germany again in a few years."

Those who, on the other hand, are in favor of a negotiated peace now argue that the bloodshed and destruction must be stopped, that it would be the only way to avoid the complete devastation of England, and that England "is almost licked anyhow."

Pulse of The Public

DOMINANT AIR POWER TO CONTROL WORLD

Editor Constitution: The basic theme of many editorial writers for some time past has been "because the dominant air power in Europe has not swept the earth of all opposition, air power is ineffective." I respectfully submit that this is a premise predicated upon a fallacy and that the same is doing our country a disservice.

Air activity is in its infancy and has been neglected in a grievous manner by those people who would have put it to the use of and not the abuse of humanity.

The United States of North America is the only nation extant having the manpower, ingenuity, natural resources, and gold necessary to build and maintain the equipment necessary for domination in the air. This being true, it is our duty to humanity to do just that, because eventually if not now, the nation dominating the air lanes will also dominate the sea and land routes. This domination will be safe in our hands because it will be humanely held and justly used by a nation dedicated to the service of mankind such as ours is and shall continue to be.

Our job now is to prove to humanity that democracy is the most vital force extant and that this is so because it is dedicated to the proposition that true manhood is sovereign on the earth as was ordered by man's Creator in the beginning.

Keep this self-evident fact before the people and the various "isms" with their undemocratic and inhumane ideologies will never take hold upon any self-respecting man anywhere.

REMINDS LEGISLATURE VOTES BACK TALMADGE

Editor, Constitution: What is the matter with the legislature?

Has the habit of sitting and wrangling and doing nothing of the past four years got such a hold on them that they are unable to abide by the decision of the people who sent them to the capitol to do a specific job? Aren't they able to get out from under the influence of the tear-droppers, breast-beating politicians who, while pleading with cracked voices for the old and the blind and the dear put-upon school teachers, were wheeling the money sent there to pay them out the back door in a wheelbarrow to monopolists (nole contentre Evans); to manufacturers of road machinery for equipment for which the only use they had was to set it beside some out-of-the-way country road to rust; for buildings about which the legislature knew nothing; for houses on private property; for things of like nature ad infinitum?

Last summer Georgia, 132 counties of it, signified their faith in Eugene Talmadge and their desire to have him lead them out of this morass of debt and artificial sentimentality by electing him Governor. Those same people are still behind him. They remember the candidates who, wanting to get into office, inconvenienced themselves time and again in order to be seen on the same platform with him. They are watching them now. Thank you for publishing the roll call of votes. It is very enlightening. (MRS.) ROCIA DORITY BUTTS, Greensboro, Ga.

Dodge Widow Weds Surgeon At Quiet Rites

Former Telephone Operator Got $2,500,000 From Estate.

CHICAGO, Jan. 30.—(P)—Annie Laurine McDonald Dodge, former telephone operator who received a $2,500,000 share of an automobile fortune, was married today to Dr. William A. Lange, a Detroit plastic surgeon.

The couple disclosed while changing trains here that they had kept their plans secret until the wedding this morning in the chapel of the Emmanuel Memorial Episcopal church in Champaign, Illinois.

The pretty brunet bride was widowed a fortnight after she married Daniel Dodge, automobile fortune heir, on August 2, 1938. He was wounded by an explosion of dynamite he was handling at his honeymoon cottage on Manitoulin Island in Georgian bay and fell from a motorboat and drowned while he was being taken to a hospital. A settlement approved in court last July awarded her $2,500,000 of his estate.

She told reporters that she met Dr. Lange 18 months ago when she went to his office as a patient, and a short time later they started keeping company "on the quiet." They attended few social functions together and not even the physician's office staff knew of the impending marriage.

Mrs. Lange, attired in a mink coat adorned with an orchid, recalled that she had refrained from denying rumors linking her name to that of Charley Gehring, Detroit Tigers' second baseman, because her silence suited her desire to keep her marital intentions private.

The couple left Chicago late in the day for Sun Valley, Idaho. They planned to spend two weeks there and a similar period in Florida.

No matter how many medicines you have tried, and all your druggist to sell you a bottle of Creomulsion with the understanding you must like the way it quickly allays the cough or you are to have your money back.

Defects To Cull Third of Boys Called in Draft

400,000 Face Rejection Out of 1,200,000 To Be Summoned.

By THOMAS R. HENRY.
Science Editor, North American Newspaper Alliance.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 30.—At least 1,200,000 men will be called to meet the draft quota of 800,000 expected by July 1, 1941.

Approximately 400,000 will be turned away because of physical defects, without considering the vast numbers exempted because of families or because they cannot be spared from essential industries.

This is the estimate of the United States Public Health Service based on an intensive study of the disposition of the second million men drafted in the United States in the first World War. It assumes that the general health of men of draft age is as good as it was in 1918. It is probably slightly better, Public Health Service officials say. On the other hand defects not recognized then, such as certain preinsanity symptoms, will be causes for rejection now.

Records for 1918. The study was made by Public Health Service statisticians Rollo H. Britten and George St. J. Perrott because of proposals that either their home states or the federal government rehabilitate, wherever possible, men found unfit to serve their country in the ranks.

In 1918 approximately 40 in each 1,000 called by draft boards had bad eyes, although not necessarily bad enough to cause their rejection. This probably is worse today. Thirty-eight had crippled or paralyzed limbs and 32 were handicapped by flat feet. Thirty of each 1,000 were underweight, 24 had some form of tuberculosis, 24 had teeth in such poor condition that the men were not admissible in the Army. About four of each thousand were insane or epileptic.

The rate of rejections varied enormously according to states. In Rhode Island nearly 60 per cent of those called were turned down while in Wyoming only 18 per cent were rejected. The reason in part, Public Health statisticians say, is more rigid examinations in some places, but it reveals a real physical difference between the young men of different parts of the country.

Status Unchanged. Rhode Island has a large industrial population whereas the youth of Wyoming was largely rural, living in the open air and accustomed to vigorous physical exercise. There is little reason to believe, they say, that the relative status has changed very much.

The age limits from which the second million was chosen in 1918 were 21 to 31. It required 1,672,661 men to obtain 967,486 men fit for full service. After the age of 30 physical defects began to increase rapidly, so the difference in age limits of the present draft should more than offset any improvement in the general health. By the time the drafting of the second million started, Britten and Perrott point out, the examination procedure had become standardized so that few were escaping service for pretended ailments.

There is every reason to expect, they believe, that at least one-third of those called in the present draft will not be fit for full military service, although some of them may be fit for limited training or be able to render service in various war industries.

after a cold then what

DOCTORS stress remaining in bed until the body temperature is normal. Sound advice. You know how weak you feel after a cold. Colds play havoc in weakening the body. The story is well told in the blood picture. It is important to build back body strength right away to carry the load of work, worries, and loss of sleep. A weakened body may be more susceptible to relapse or long drawn out recovery.

So reason sensibly and take the choice of millions by immediately starting on a course of S.S.S. Tonic—taken three times a day immediately before meals. In the absence of a local infection or organic disease, you should note improvement in the way you feel and look within the first 10 days. The confidence of millions over many years is the best testimonial of this product.

An experience with S.S.S. Tonic will cause you to say to your friends, S.S.S. made me "feel and look like myself again."

Minimum Diet Study Is Made Is Planned for On Division of United States Welfare Funds

One Definite Step Already Under Way To 'Fortify' Flour.

By THOMAS R. HENRY.
Science Editor, North American Newspaper Alliance.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 30.—Three-fourths of America's 130,000,000 people, the best-fed in the world, are living on diets below the "margin of safety."

At least one-fourth, due to dire poverty, lack the food ingredients essential to health. Another two-fourths, because of poverty, ignorance, or ingrained food habits, do not get enough of one or more of the essential ingredients to keep bodies and minds at their best.

These are the figures of the Bureau of Home Economics of the United States Department of Agriculture, which has conducted extensive studies of the kitchens and dinner tables in all parts of the country. They err, say the bureau workers, only on the side of extreme conservatism. A committee of the National Research Council headed by Dr. Russell Wilder, of the Mayo Foundation, is now at work on drawing up a minimum adequate diet for the population. It is a measure of national defense, considered as important and even more fundamental than the production of guns and airplanes. Upon the physical and mental efficiency of the masses, probably the most important element of which is diet, depends their performance in every other line.

To Conduct Drives. When the minimum diets are formulated local committees in nearly every community will be named to conduct campaigns of popular education and do everything else possible to see they are included in the meals of every family.

"It is the greatest health move in history," said Dr. W. H. Sebrell, diet expert of the United States Public Health Service. "In one stroke, for example, it should wipe out our present 200,000 cases of pellagra in the south and the iron anemia which is so widespread."

The diets, as they leave the hands of the committee, will appear rather unappetizing. They will prescribe not pork chops and ice cream, but iron, copper, calcium, riboflavin, thiamin, etc. It will be the duty of some such organization as the Bureau of Home Economics to translate them into terms of the market basket—such as beef, potatoes, sugar and carrots.

They still are in a formative state and probably will not be ready for the public for another month. But, according to Bureau of Home Economics workers who have attended some of the conferences, the inclination seems to be to fix as a minimum diet their own borderline between the good and the fairly adequate. Some things will be called for which they never have dared call for themselves, considering the difficulties of getting them into the market baskets of the poor.

One definite step is already under way to fortify flour with iron, nicotinic acid, vitamin B-1, and possibly two or three other vitamins and minerals, which will supply at least one-fourth of the needs of the people for essentials in which they now are badly deficient, at a cost of less than one-tenth of a cent for a loaf of bread. It is calculated that the average meals of an American provide at least 2,000 calories of food value and that, year in and year out, 600 calories a day are provided by bread.

The larger flour mills of the country are co-operating. They long have been stung by the criticism that modern methods of milling take out of wheat many of its essential food values. The Food and Drug Administration of the Federal Security Administration is now writing, after extended hearings, specifications for a "fortified flour." It is expected that these specifications will be promulgated about July 1. After that ordinary flour still can be sold, but it must be advertised as such. Present indications are that very few mills will continue it, except as a specialty.

The new flour will differ little, so far as taste and appearance are concerned, from the familiar product. It may have a slightly yellow tinge and have a slight "wheaty" taste, experts believe.

Plans are now being formulated to put vitamin A and possibly some other essential elements into margarine. Otherwise the new diets will consist of the familiar articles of food, but in different proportions.

Dealers Lend Co-operation to Cooking School

Fashion Show Will Be Highlight of Constitution Event.

Atlanta merchants are co-operating with The Constitution in presenting the modern cooking school which opens at 9 o'clock Tuesday morning at the Erlanger theater, conducted by Miss Katharine Baldrige, nationally known home economics expert.

Displays of a variety of merchandise will be highlighted by a fashion show with models showing the latest in spring and late winter clothes. This is only one of the many attractive features of the cooking school.

The lecture-demonstrations will include discussions of the very latest modern kitchen equipment and food, from light party menus to hearty winter meals, will be prepared by Miss Baldrige. She will also discuss the best ingredients for use in various dishes.

Among the firms co-operating in many ways are: Rogers Food Stores, Davison-Paxon, Rich's, Weinstock's, Irvindale Dairies, Georgia Power Company, Bame's, Sherwin-Williams, King Hardware Company, Pig 'n' Whistle, Regenstein's, Sterchi Furniture Company, Ed Matthews, Thompson-Boland-Lee, Clorox Chemical Company, Spry, Rinso, Lux Toilet Soap, Pillsbury Flour, Kellogg's All Bran, Wear-Ever Aluminum Company, National Biscuit Company, Derby Foods, Peter Pan Peanut Butter and Northern Paper Mills.

The classes will start promptly at 9 o'clock Tuesday through Friday morning. The doors of the theater will open at 8:30 o'clock. Each session will last until 11:30 o'clock and Atlantans, more than ever before, are expected to take advantage of the opportunity of attending a Constitution-sponsored cooking school.

National defense may deprive the Ohio valley of its only gallery of strictly modern art in Louisville, Ky. Martin Conrad Shallenberger, Annapolis graduate who recently founded the gallery, may have to close it if called for naval duty.

Why not surprise the family with French-fried shrimp for a luncheon or dinner treat? Fried shrimps are tender, digestible, delicious. You will need:

French-Fried Shrimp.
1-2 pounds green shrimp
2 eggs
Juice 2 lemons
Salt, pepper
Sifted cracker crumbs
Hot shortening
Peel shrimp, wash and remove and vein. Place them in a bowl with lemon juice, salt and pepper to taste and allow them to stand (marinate) 15 minutes. Heat shortening 380-400 degrees F. Beat the eggs. Dip shrimp in eggs and then roll in crumbs. Place a single layer in frying basket and cook 3 minutes. (Rub basket first with shortening.)

Fruit salad and cheese cubes are a pleasant pair. Roll one-inch bread cubes in a mixture of 2 tablespoons melted butter and 1 beaten egg, roll in grated cheese, then bake on a cookie sheet in a moderate oven (350 degrees F.) until the cheese melts. Hot or cold, they are grand with fresh or canned fruits.

Noodles, Pork and Peas.

Cook one package egg noodles until tender in rapidly boiling salted water. Drain. Brown 3-4 pound ground pork in 1 tablespoon drippings, add 2 small onions chopped, and 1 cup chopped celery. Cook 10 minutes. In a large bowl, combine well the cooked noodles and meat with 2 cups canned peas. Add 1 can tomato soup, 1-3 cup water, 1 teaspoon salt, 1-4 pound grated American cheese, and a sprinkle of pepper. Place in a buttered casserole and bake 45 minutes in moderate oven (350 degrees Fahrenheit).

A quick relish is made by putting 1 orange, rind and all, through the food chopper, and mixing with 1 can of cranberry sauce, or 1 to 2 cups fresh sauce.

"Pepper Pan Roast."

1 cup catsup
2 tablespoons butter or margarine
1-4 teaspoon mustard
1 teaspoon Worcestershire sauce
Salt and paprika
1 teaspoon flour
1 pint oysters
Toast or crackers
Blend catsup, butter, mustard, sauce and seasonings over low heat. Thicken with the flour. Add oysters. Place on back of stove, or over very low heat to plump oysters. Serve on crisp toast or crackers. Serves 4.

Broiled Short Ribs of Beef.

Have ribs cut into serving portions. Brown on all sides in hot fat. Over them slice onions, add salt and pepper, chopped parsley, 1 tablespoon sugar, 1 tablespoon Worcestershire and 1 cup meat stock or hot water. Cover and let simmer 1 hour. Remove the short-ribs, when done, and thicken the liquid with a little flour blended with cold water. Serve with a little flour blended with cold water. Serve with garnish of vegetables.

Good coffee comes out of the pot every time if you follow simple directions:

1. A good quality coffee.
 2. An absolutely clean, freshly scalded coffee pot.
 3. Plenty of coffee, one heaping tablespoon to each measuring cup of water and extra spoonful for the pot if you like it strong.
- These are the important essentials of good coffee no matter whether you use percolator, drip or glass coffee-makers. Always measure coffee and water. Remove grounds as soon as coffee is ready. Serve immediately and piping hot. Reheated coffee is never good, coffee that has been allowed to boil is terrible. For after-dinner service make coffee double strength.

You'll meet many health-giving vitamins and minerals as you go down vegetable row.

Down Vegetable Row

For health's sake a wide variety of vegetables should be eaten. All vegetables contain minerals and vitamins and are important for providing bulk. But some are rich in certain elements; others rich in something else, and in order to get all necessary elements it is advisable to like and eat almost all vegetables freely and regularly.

Vegetable cookery is most important, because in cooking a vegetable may lose 50 per cent or more of its valuable vitamins and minerals. These may be thrown away in the water or destroyed by heat or oxidation.

Read carefully and consider seriously the suggestions that follow regarding vegetable care and cooking.

1. Wash vegetables promptly and store them in the refrigerator in the vegetable crisper or in refrigerator bags. Buy only enough leafy, green and yellow vegetables for two days at a time, for these vegetables are perishable as far as vitamin values are concerned.
2. Cook vegetables quickly, and not one second longer than is necessary for tenderness. There's nothing more appetizing than a hint of garden freshness in green vegetables.
3. Plan the rest of the meal so that when your vegetables are done dinner can be served. Keeping vegetables hot destroys vitamins and freshness.
4. All vegetables should be cooked in boiling water—that is, if you are boiling them! Do not start them in cold water and simmer until all the flavor is gone.

Strong Juiced Vegetables.
The strong juiced vegetables, that is onions, cabbage, Brussels sprouts, broccoli, cauliflower, turnips, kale should be cooked in rapidly boiling water to completely cover them, a teaspoon of lemon juice or vinegar added, and the pan left uncovered. Cook them just long enough to have them tender—overcooking makes these vegetables strong in flavor and unappetizing in appearance.

Sweet Juiced Vegetables.
The sweet juiced vegetables, peas, string beans, beets, corn, artichokes, celery, celery root salsify (oyster plant), corn are cooked in boiling water to barely cover and in a covered pan. They, too, are cooked only long enough to make them tender, if you would preserve flavor, nutritive value and appearance. Have no water left over from cooking these vegetables. See that it is all absorbed.

Green Vegetables.

The green vegetables—spinach, peas, broccoli, asparagus, Brussels sprouts, will be a better color if dropped in boiling water and cooked uncovered until barely tender then drained immediately. The French, masters of vegetable cookery, add a few grains of sugar to these vegetables—as much as you can hold between your thumb and first finger!

Specifically, let us start with broccoli. Choose broccoli that is green and fresh looking. Cut off as much of the stalk as is hard and tough. Wash the heads under cold water and, if you are not going to use it at once, put it in the refrigerator. When ready to cook, put the broccoli, stems down, in rapidly boiling water to which you have added salt and a few grains of sugar. If possible use a pan that will keep the heads just above water. These, being more tender than the stems, will cook to pieces if they are under water. Cook for 20 to 30 minutes in an uncovered pan. When the stems can be easily pierced with a fork, the vegetable is done. Drain carefully, place in a hot dish and pour over the broccoli melted butter seasoned with lemon juice, salt and pepper; or serve with white sauce mixed with lemon juice and beaten into a well-beaten egg (a good imitation of hollandaise).

Swiss chard—cook the same as spinach, exactly.
Eggplant may be cooked in a number of ways. It may be peeled, cut crosswise in slices, a scant fourth-inch thick, dipped in beaten egg and fine bread crumbs and fried until crisp and brown in hot fat in a frying pan; or the slices may be dipped in melted butter, sprinkled with salt, pepper and paprika, and broiled until tender. In either form these may be served with almost any roast, stewed or fried meat, although the flavor seems to blend best with lamb and mutton. The eggplant may be cut in squares, cooked in boiling, salted water until tender (about 8 minutes), then drained and mixed with tomato sauce and grated cheese and baked in the oven for 20 minutes.

Oyster plant, or salsify must be scraped—only the stalks are used. As soon as they are scraped drop them into cold water to which you have added a little lemon juice. Otherwise the stalks will turn very dark. When they are scraped, cut them across in slices, cook for 15 or 20 minutes in boiling salted water or until just tender, drain and serve with melted butter mixed with lemon juice and paprika, or with melted butter, lemon juice and minced parsley, or with cream sauce.

Turnips in Cream.
8 turnips
2 cups milk
4 tablespoons flour
4 tablespoons butter
Salt and pepper
Pare the turnips, cut them in small pieces, cook until tender. Make a white sauce of the flour, fat, milk and seasonings. Pour sauce over turnips and serve.

Turnip Shells or Cups.
6 large turnips
Salt
Pare and remove the centers of the turnips, leaving a cup one-half inch in thickness. Cook shells in boiling water until tender. Just before cooking is completed, add the salt. Cook the centers in the same way and use for stuffing cups or serve as mashed turnips.

The turnip cups may be used as cases for creamed or buttered peas, beets, carrots, or any suitable vegetable or meat.

Below: Creamed Chicken, Mushrooms

4 tablespoons butter
1-4 cup finely chopped celery
5 tablespoons flour
2 cups milk
Melt butter in top of double boiler, add celery and saute over direct heat until transparent; do not brown. Add flour and blend well. Add milk and cook over hot water until sauce is thickened and well cooked. Season with salt and add lemon juice slowly. Saute mushrooms in a small amount of butter until tender. Add diced chicken and saute mushrooms to the sauce and heat thoroughly. Serve in patty shells or on buttered biscuits. Serves 6.

The recipe for creamed chicken and mushrooms lends itself to a variety of variations. Substitute a teaspoon of prepared mustard and a dash of curry powder for the lemon juice when leftover lamb is used. Creamed ham is made into a savory dish when a teaspoon or more of horseradish is substituted for the lemon juice.

START OF ROMANCE—George Brent and Ann Sheridan made a picture together called "Honeymoon for Three" in which the longest kiss, on records, 56 seconds, was filmed. It started a romance which has since kept the gossip columns hot. George and Ann star in this "Honeymoon for Three," which opens today at the Roxy, inaugurating a new policy of first run films for that theater.

Three Tower Fugitives Given Prison Terms

Freedom Is Expensive for Trio Who Flew Through Shaft.

The short-lived freedom of three escapes from Fulton tower yesterday proved expensive to a trio, who on last December 9 climbed up the steep air shaft at the "big rock" to the jail roof and let themselves out of prison.

Judge Jesse M. Wood, of the criminal court of Fulton county, gave straight 12-month sentences to George Huff and J. H. Jordan, two of the escape principals, and imposed a six-month sentence against John Crisp, third escape.

Chief Jailor A. B. (Bud) Foster told the court that the men damaged doors and grills valued at about $150 in prying them open.

Huff was returned to Atlanta Wednesday after being apprehended several days ago in Louisiana. Crisp was captured in Chattanooga, and Jordan was taken in Atlanta—both only a few days after they escaped. At the time of the break, Huff was appealing from a three-year robbery sentence, while the other two were awaiting trial for robbery, according to court officials.

Georgia College Delegates To Meet

Delegates from 27 Georgia institutions of higher learning will meet here today for the silver anniversary of the Association of Georgia Colleges.

President Paul Cousins, of Shorter, will make the invocation at the opening meeting scheduled for tonight in the Georgia Tech dining hall. Raymond R. Paty, president of Birmingham-Southern College, will talk on "Competition or Co-operation?"

A round table discussion on "Our Colleges and the Defense Program" will be led by Dean Vernon Skiles, of Georgia Tech. Dr. James R. McCain, president of Agnes Scott College, is president of the association.

Gasoline Dealers Protest Tax Bill

A delegation of gasoline dealers yesterday afternoon called on Governor Talmadge to protest a bill amending the motor fuel tax act so as to eliminate an allowance of one per cent to distributors to cover losses and expense incurred in collecting the tax.

The Governor told members of the delegation he was not in favor of increasing the taxes and suggested they might take up the matter with members of the house of representatives.

The bill, sponsored by administration leaders, already has passed the senate and is now pending action of the house.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 30.—(AP)—Leon Henderson, price stabilization commissioner for the Defense Commission, said today that measures would be adopted soon to end "the present unstable and dangerous situation" in the zinc scrap and secondary zinc markets.

Henderson gave no indication of the nature of the measures, nor did he disclose recommendations submitted by an industry committee.

U. S. Asks Bids On Wheat for Sale to Mexico

Agriculture Department To Subsidize Export of Surplus Holdings.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 30.—(AP)—The Agriculture Department took steps today to subsidize the export of a quantity of American wheat to Mexico.

It asked exporters to submit bids by 8 a. m. (Atlanta time) Monday for the purchase of wheat from government-owned stocks for export to Mexico. Officials declined to say what quantity might be shipped under this program. Some indicated, however, it might be between 1,000,000 and 3,000,000 bushels.

Officials explained that bids were expected to be low enough to enable exporters to sell at competitive world levels which have been running between 25 and 30 cents a bushel below prices in the United States. Prices in this country have been pegged above world levels by government crop control programs.

Life After War To Be Discussed

Conditions facing America upon conclusion of the present World War will be discussed at a joint luncheon session of the Lions and Transportation Clubs today by Colonel Henry Watkins Anderson, of Richmond, Va., who saw active relief work in the Balkans after the last World War. The meeting will start at 12:30 o'clock at the Ansley hotel.

The speaker, a former assistant United States attorney general, is co-receiver of the Seaboard Air Line railroad and a director of the Dominion Securities Company. He was decorated by many countries for his activities with the Red Cross as a lieutenant colonel.

TO DANCE AGAIN—"The Stardust Girl," Mary Agnes Crawford, who was a well-known Atlanta dancer several years ago before arthritis put a stop to her career, has overcome her illness and will dance for the veterans at U. S. Hospital 48 Saturday night. Left to right are W. C. Almond, Herman Scholnick, and E. C. Crawford, her father, all patients at the hospital, who are admiring their pretty visitor.

Dancer Whips Arthritis, To Perform Again

Mrs. Hurley C. Roberson Will Dance at Veterans' Hospital.

Mary Agnes Crawford, before arthritis abruptly put an end to a budding career, used to dance quite a bit at civic entertainments around Atlanta. Doctors told her she could never dance again. But several years have passed and the dancer, now as Mrs. Hurley C. Roberson, of Houston, Texas, she will perform at 7:30 o'clock Saturday night at United States Hospital 48 for the veterans.

Mrs. Hurley is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward C. Crawford, of 1156 Ponce de Leon avenue. She is visiting here during the illness that rendered her legs useless. Saturday will be the first time Mr. Crawford has seen his daughter dance since she recovered.

Laurens County Mules

Attacked by Rabid Fox
DUBLIN, Ga., Jan. 30.—A fox, believed to have been rabid, viciously attacked two mules on the farm of Julian Witherington near here yesterday, it was reported by Dr. J. L. Smalley, Dublin veterinarian, who was called to treat them.

The mules, being plowed in a field near a clump of weeds, were bit about the legs when the fox suddenly appeared from the underbrush. Two plowhands made their way to safety, and the fox disappeared in the woods after the attack.

Hollywood Is Planning To Draft Bob Hope For Mayordom of City

By Sheila Graham.

HOLLYWOOD, Jan. 30.—Dorothy Lamour, is the colonel's daughter in "Caught in the Draft," which will give you some idea of how she is getting on. She wears 22 different outfits. Intention: to charm Bob Hope, who is a movie actor caught in the draft.

Dorothy is the tidiest gal in town; her mouth droops wearily between "takes." "This is my fourth picture in five months," she tells me. "And what with fittings for my dresses and having to learn my dialogue for this film and for two others that follow, I don't quite know where I am." I get the hint and leave her to her toil. Dorothy has changed. She used to be more cordial. And she will be again (I hope) when she gets that vacation.

Bob Hope is tired also, but conceals it better than his co-starring partner. "How do I look in my uniform?" he wants to know. He answers himself, "Not bad, hey?" Hope has been nominated for the mayordom of Hollywood. He does not want to accept. "Who am I to launch battleships, open new boulevards and make speeches? I haven't been here long enough. They ought to give some of the other boys a chance." The current plan is to "draft" him for mayor. But don't tell Bob I told you.

Bob and Bing Crosby, plus two golf pros, leave soon on a cross-country tour on behalf of British relief funds. They will play golf by day and appear in theaters at night. For a tired man—or a non-tired man—Bob gives more generously of his time and talents than anyone else out here.

Jean Arthur has a beautiful body tan—and there's quite a lot of it showing in the Coney Island scene in "The Devil and Miss Jones." I don't remember ever seeing Jean before in a swimming suit. She should do it more often—the figure is cute. The tan on the midriff, neck, shoulders, arms and legs is strictly phony. Not sun, but makeup is responsible for its all-over smoothness.

Director Sam Wood—his last chore was "Kitty Foyle"—tells me that a different technique is required for different actresses; but when I press him for a comparison between Ginger Rogers and Miss Arthur, he pretends not to hear and instead says "Hello!" to young James Craig, who has just come on the set. The lad—the doctor friend of Ginger Rogers in "Kitty Foyle"—addresses the director as "Pappy." The director has aided more young actors in Hollywood than you can shake a stick at. He is guiding Craig's career, warning him against the acceptance of "pretty-boy" roles and urging him to stick to the Gary Cooper type he-man pictures.

Here's something I didn't know about Wood: He is responsible for Paulette Goddard's meeting Charlie Chaplin. Until Sam told me, I thought Chaplin and Paulette had met on the set of "Kid From Spain." But, "it was in Caliente," says the director. "I introduced them. They danced the rumba." And their romance began.

"Would it matter," says impish Oscar Levant on the "Kiss the Boys Goodbye" set, "if I walked off the set now? I want to hear some music!" The director seems to think it would matter very much. Oscar Giggles, says, "Okay, now watch me be self-conscious." But he isn't. This bothers Levant. "I'm no longer tense," he complains, "and I'm no good when I'm not tense. But this isn't my racket. And why should I torture myself for pictures?"

"Why not?" asks this writer. "You're getting paid for it, aren't you?" "Yeah, but not much. Besides I brought my family out here (a wife and baby), and we've already eaten up the profits. My kid is now on relief."

Today's Charm Tip

The least charming of table companions is the person who insists upon talking and chewing food at the same time.

MY DAY: The "Open Road" Organization

By Eleanor Roosevelt.

WASHINGTON, Wednesday.—Yesterday Mrs. Henry Wallace, the wife of the vice president, gave a delightful lunch for the wives of the members of the senate. Old acquaintances seemed very happy to meet again, and the wives of new members were welcomed with open arms. Last night we gave one of the most interesting dinners that I have attended for a long time. I think one of the things vital to all of us today is a knowledge of our own country. Therefore, I am deeply interested in any method by which this knowledge may be acquired. The "Open Road," in whose interest our dinner was given last night, is one of the organizations which I think is doing an extremely good piece of work along the lines of a better understanding of our own United States and its people.

They organize groups to study different sections of the country. Many of the people who take these six-to-eight-week trips are teachers, social workers and undergraduates. All of them reach out to certain definite groups in their own communities and will share the knowledge which they obtain.

These trips are not just sight-seeing trips, but trips in which a real study is made of the life in a whole community; its industrial and agricultural opportunities; its education, recreational and social life. It is hoped that this summer there will be ten such trips offered. I cannot help feeling that everyone taking advantage of this type of travel will gain immeasurably in the knowledge of the country.

The speeches last night were so good that I found people did not even look tired when we broke up at midnight, and that is saying a good deal for after-dinner speeches! Dr. Neilson presided and, though he began by saying that he was told his remarks need have no human interest, I am quite sure that everyone present found much in what he said which was of interest from the standpoint of humanity and culture.

We are drawing to the climax of the infantile paralysis campaign. Many people have sent me their contributions to the march of dimes, and our mail is somewhat delayed by the flow of letters to the President. I am sure that the whole country is more conscious of the work for crippled people because of this yearly event. It always brings me a knowledge of something new.

This year the work of a convalescent home in Rockaway Park, N. Y., which is extremely interesting. The patients there have developed a printing shop, partly as a rehabilitation measure and partly for support. You may order from them writing paper, calling cards, placecards, playing cards and bridge scores. In fact, I imagine they would execute any printing order that you chose to give them.

The pictures in the booklet sent me show the teacher laboriously training crippled hands and arms, showing boys on crutches how to operate certain machines, and yet the faces of the youngsters show complete forgetfulness of infirmities in the interest of their job and they look like happy young people.

Pine Sachet Has Fresh, Clean Odor

By Winifred Ware.

There is something clean and inviting about the odor of pine. Perhaps it is the reminder of the outdoors; perhaps the remembrance of a pine-needled hillside after a rain. With a new and novel sachet now on the toilet goods counters, it is possible to have a fresh pine scent right in your home. This sachet is in the shape of a cone, and the odor is truly pine.

It is a fragrance that will keep your clothes and linens fresh smelling. The cone has a green cord attached so that it may be hung in the clothes closet or linen closet.

And speaking of closets, this little sachet bag is a grand one to hang in the closet used for coats or raincoats. It counteracts the dry, musty odor which often permeates closets where little-used garments are kept.

However, the cone is equally as effective to tuck away in the corner of the linen drawer, the cedar chest or the chest of drawers, the pleasant pine scent giving everything a clean, sweet odor.

The idea of a pine sachet goes back to grandmother's girlhood days and beyond. Remember that good housekeepers used to put pine and cedar chips among their clothes and linens, and in their hope chests? Well, it's the same idea and the same favorite in modern manner.

If you'd like to try these, you can buy these pine scented cones for 25 cents each and the odor will last for several weeks. Call Winifred Ware at WA. 6565 and I'll tell you where you may buy the cones. Write to me in care of The Constitution, enclosing a stamped envelope, if you don't live in the city.

Etiquette Tips Help The Young

A small thing, a slip in etiquette! But you never know when it may plant a doubt in the minds of people who were prepared to like you.

"I'm so glad to have met you," the young man exclaims to the girl who seemed so attractive at the party. But shaky on her etiquette, she replies with the cheap "It's mutual, I'm sure!" and the young man begins to wonder.

"What would she do if I took her to a smart restaurant? She'd probably think it was up to her to pick out a table. Or she wouldn't know when she should thank the waiter." And he never makes that telephone call she'd hoped for; naturally he prefers to date a poised smooth-mannered girl he can be proud of.

So, you see, you can't be too careful about etiquette. When anyone expresses pleasure at having met you, it's correct to reply with a simple, "Thank you" or "I hope we meet again."

And, dining in a restaurant, you won't give your escort a twinge if you remember that the man as host selects the table. Remember, too, that you thank a waiter for unusual services such as picking up your dropped purse, but not for filling a glass or bringing the order.

At parties, too, make a charming impression. On leaving thank your hostess for a delightful evening, but don't say "I enjoyed my dinner so much" as if the meal were more important than the company.

Playing hostess yourself? Always let a guest precede you into a room. Rise to greet company, even a man, though of course a woman doesn't ordinarily stand to greet a man.

Send 15 cents in coins for our booklet, ETIQUETTE FOR EVERY DAY, to Home Institute, The Constitution, Atlanta, Ga. Write plainly your name, address, and the name of booklet.

Health Is Surest Road To Beauty

By Ida Jean Kain.

Somehow or other, we have come to think of glamor as the hot-house variety of beauty. But Hedy Lamarr, the No. 1 glamor girl of the films, follows a program based on the conviction that health is the surest road to beauty, and that there is nothing more alluring than a sturdy, outdoor freshness!

It seems strange to find the lovely Miss Lamarr is an outdoor girl. I might as well own up that I had secretly regarded her as a bit of a softie—but the way she can hop a fence has changed my opinion and increased my respect. She is as lightfooted as a little boy accustomed to playing leap-frog!

Although hopping a fence is her favorite stunt for keeping a slim waist, you will be relieved to know that her regular exercise is more conventional. She likes gardening—and doesn't confine herself to bossing the gardener! There is nothing like transplanting a few hundred seedlings, she says, to give your muscles a general workout. Every morning that she is not required at the studio is spent working in her garden.

What about the sun and that peaches-and-cream complexion? She lets the sun beat directly on her face for 10 minutes a day, but from then on protects her skin with a large straw hat.

She is a soap and water baby! She believes in washing her face night and morning with pure castile soap, rubbing the thick lather in and massaging briskly with an up-and-out motion. The water for this treatment is hot. The soap is then rinsed off with warm water and she finishes with a dash of cold—just as it comes from the tap.

Because Miss Lamarr thinks cream bases give a made-up appearance, she avoids them as much as possible and uses a hand lotion as a foundation. After working at the studio, she removes that make-up with mineral oil, washes her face thoroughly, pats on the hand lotion—and leaves off powder for the ride home. She thinks screen work puts enough strain on the skin and at least one day a week goes without make-up of any kind.

Her one cosmetic tip is to be careful in choosing the right powder for your coloring; she observes that women are apt to be too casual in that respect, and that the wrong shade throws the coloring of the eyes off. You might remember that the next time you replenish your supply of powder.

POINTS FOR PARENTS

By Edyth Thomas Wallace.

Grandmother: "Who are those boys?"

Mother: "Just boys whom John brings home from school. He knows he can ask anyone here to play that he wants."

Mother: "You boys run on home now. John is going downtown with me." (Later) "I don't want you to play with those boys. They're not our kind of people."

Restricting a child's social contacts too much may result in a lack of adaptability which he will need when he is grown.

The Gentleman--

From Clarke . . . From Chatsworth . . . From Jackson

Representative L. O. Price, of Clarke.

One of the house's youngest married members is L. Olin Price Jr., of Clarke county. A lawyer, Olin finished at the University of Georgia in 1936 and is this year a freshman in the lower chamber.

Olin sees the legislature as an educational institution—at least for a young attorney. He's here for the contacts which he may make, for the experiences which are his while a member of the law-making body of the state, and for the educational aspects of the entire session. He's 26, the son of a prominent Athens civic and business leader.

Senator J. N. Steed, of Chatsworth (43d District).

Senator J. Noel Steed, whose friends, he says, elected him Murray county school superintendent when he graduated from Mercer Law school "in order that I might make a living and practice law," is now a 46-year-old man. His grandfather Steed went into Murray county to make his home before the Cherokee Indians left that section.

His father, a farmer, sent him to Dalton to school and then to Mercer University to obtain his LL. B. degree. For 15 years he was solicitor general of the Cherokee circuit and he has been a member of "all those fraternities men join." He has two daughters.

Representative C. E. Hardy, of Jackson.

Representative C. E. Hardy, of Jackson county, is a wholesale oil distributor, in the legislature for his first term. He is interested in the state from an economical standpoint.

A recent mayor of Jefferson, he has long been active in his community although he is not particularly politically inclined. He served on the Jefferson city council for several years.

The 46-year-old son is the father of three children. The 46-year-old son, father of three children, thinks the contacts afforded by membership in the legislature are priceless to a man. He is not interested in the fiery verbal battles but in the educational aspects of the sessions.

21 New Bills Introduced In Lower House

One Would Enable Wildlife Bureau To Get U. S. Funds.

An act to enable the Georgia Division of Wildlife to receive federal aid was introduced in the house yesterday by Representatives Bynum, of Rabun; Greene, of Jones; Bruce, of Troup; Howard, of Long; Smiley, of Liberty; Taft, of Atkinson, and Bill, of Bryan.

According to Zack Cravey, state wildlife commissioner, passage of the bill would add between $38,000 and $43,000 in federal funds annually to the department's revenue. The funds, Cravey said, would be used on wildlife propagation projects carried out by the state department subject to the approval of the federal government.

Twenty-one new bills and a resolution were introduced into the lower house yesterday before members began discussion of the administration bill to lengthen the term of the governor and other constitutional officers to four years.

Gas Tax Change. The lone resolution called for legislative approval of the executive act of June 6, 1940, repealing the state tax on gasoline and motor fuel bought for government owned planes used to train aviators in the state.

The bills included amendments to the charter of Jonesboro, a measure to raise the pensions of Confederate veterans and their widows, an act that would give state convicts a 10-hour day, a police pension act for the city of Atlanta, and a measure by Representatives Etheridge and Kendrick, of Fulton, and Rogers and Hicks, of Floyd, that would make the code governing Atlanta barbers the state law.

The police pension act, sponsored by Representative Dunaway, of DeKalb, would have the city appropriate $90,000 each year to the pension fund, replacing the present system of building up the fund with fines and forfeitures.

Set Up Barber Board. The barber code bill would set up the State Board of Barber and Hairdresser Examiners, composed of eight members and empowered to license barbers, manicurists and beauticians.

A bill proposed by Representative Max Loooper, of Dawson, would set a 10-hour maximum work day for convicts. Loooper was cosponsor of a bill with Goddard, of Spalding, raising the pensions of the widows of Confederate veterans from $30 to $50 a month, of veterans from $50 to $75 a month, and of veterans in homes from $5 to $15 a month.

Tax Discount Cut. Another bill would cut the three per cent discount now allowed on the purchase of more than $200 worth of tobacco tax stamps to one and one-half per cent.

Bills reported favorably by committees during the day included one to allow the Atlanta city council to pay the widow of Matt Leonard, the late zoo keeper, the pension her husband would have been entitled to if he had served 25 years, and the measure setting the county's maximum pauper tax levy at 2 and 3-4 mills.

Young Talmadge Hears Debate on Ouster Bill

Herman Talmadge, the Governor's son, was granted the privilege of the senate floor in a resolution introduced yesterday by Senator D. G. Bland, of Lumpkin.

Young Talmadge remained in the senate chamber listening to the debate on the suspension bill which was described as vital to the administration.

6 tbsps. Snowdrift
1½ cups sifted flour
2½ tbsps. water (about)

Using both hands, gather the mixture into a ball. Lightly dredge pastry board or cover with flour. Roll lightly from center to edge, keeping pastry as near the shape of plate as possible. Line pie plate with pastry. Prick crust well with a fork and bake 10 to 12 minutes in a 450° F. oven.

2 tbsps. Snowdrift
1½ cups brown sugar
½ tsp. salt

Mix brown sugar, flour, salt. Add milk and cook until mixture thickens, stirring constantly. Remove from range and pour over beaten egg yolks. Cook 2 min. Add Snowdrift, vanilla. Cool. Pour into baked pastry shell and cover with meringue, using the 3 egg whites and 6 tbsps. white sugar. Brown in a 325° F. oven.

Public Hearing Is Planned for Pipeline Bills

Notice Will Be Given of Meeting, Legislator Announces.

Committee hearing on bills to give pipeline operators the right of eminent domain will be public and announced in the press several days before the meeting is scheduled, Representative Bruce, of Troup, announced yesterday.

Chairman of the committee on general judiciary number two, which has the power to approve or disapprove the bills, Bruce said he had been deluged with mail on the question since the assembly convened.

The last session of the assembly gave the Southeastern Pipeline Corporation permission to build a line from Port St. Joe, Fla., through Georgia to a point near Chattahoochee. Construction had advanced as far as Bainbridge when the state supreme court upheld the contention of the railroad who were fighting the measure that the assembly's permission was at fault.

Hearing on the bill proposing to double the levy on gross insurance premiums will be held at 3 o'clock Tuesday afternoon, Representative Herschel Lovett, of Laurens county, chairman of the house ways and means committee, reported yesterday. Levy is now 1 and 1-2 per cent.

The measure, which was once under the jurisdiction of the insurance committee, whose chairman is Mrs. Helen Douglas Mankin, of Fulton, was voted into the hands of ways and means by the house last week.

Mrs. Meadows Seifert Williams Jr., who before her recent marriage was Miss Virginia Mae Sigman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Sigman. The groom is a native of West Point.

Miss Jean Holmes has returned to her home in New Orleans after visiting Miss Peggy Price on Woodcrest avenue.

Miss Reed Weds Walter MacAdam At Catholic Rites

Miss Rilla Mae Reed became the bride of Walter Kavanagh MacAdam at a ceremony solemnized yesterday afternoon at 5 o'clock at the Sacred Heart Catholic church. Father John Emmert officiated before a gathering of friends and relatives, and Vincent Hurley, organist, presented musical selections.

A Glenn Edmondson was the groom's best man, and ushers were John W. Berry and Willard R. Haines.

Mrs. Harry Bickford, matron of honor, wore a modish costume of dusty pink with a pastel feather hat. She carried a bouquet of blue delphinium and valley lilies. The radiant bride was given in marriage by her father, Herbert Clayton Reed. She wore a Niagara blue costume suit, featuring a silk dress and a full-length woolen coat. Her hat and gloves were of dusty pink and her shoulder spray was of orchids and valley lilies.

The bride's mother, Mrs. H. C. Reed, wore navy with a shoulder cluster of talisman roses. Mrs. John M. MacAdam, mother of the groom, chose a gold model with talisman roses.

Following the ceremony members of the wedding party and the immediate families were entertained at a dinner held by the bride's parents at the Georgian Terrace hotel.

Upon their return from a wedding trip to Florida Mr. and Mrs. MacAdam will reside at 1006 McLynn avenue.

Out-of-town guests attending the ceremony were Mr. and Mrs. John M. MacAdam, Miss Mary Pauline MacAdam and Miss Freida Frugh, all of Seaside, L. I.

Atlanta Quota Club.

Miss Alice Rivers, director of religious education of the North Avenue Presbyterian church, spoke at the recent meeting of the Atlanta Quota Club at a downtown tea room. Her subject dealt with the four co-ordinating types of activities in the religious program under her direction. She classified the types as worship, service, work, play.

Mrs. L. F. Bellinger, Anne's mother, and Mrs. Hiram Allen, her sister, assisted in entertaining, and Mrs. Frankton Dobbbs poured coffee.

The guests, who included the members of the wedding party, out-of-town guests and members of the families and numbered about 40, are all agreed that it was the best party they have attended in many a day!

Earlier yesterday, Anne was complimented at the luncheon given by Mrs. Sam E. McConnell at her home on Springdale road, this affair having also assembled members of the bridal party and out-of-town guests.

Mrs. Charles S. Archer Sr., of Baltimore, mother of the groom-elect, who is Mrs. McConnell's house guest, and Mrs. Bellinger assisted in entertaining.

Mrs. McConnell is a clever as well as a gracious hostess, a fact attested by the eye-appealing decoration that centered her luncheon table. Arranged on a mirror plaque were tiny dolls, dressed to resemble the attendants in today's wedding, and a miniature bride and groom placed so that they appeared to be coming through a small white gate.

Spring-like decorations were used in the other rooms of the home, artistic arrangements of daffodils, narcissi and acacia being placed advantageously.

... AND ANOTHER memorable prenuptial party of yesterday was the tea given by Frances Cundell for Martha Williams, whose marriage to Edwin Turner takes place Saturday.

And it was no exaggeration to state that the event will provide many an amused chuckle in retrospect!

The ingenious Frances decided to carry out the Valentine motif, since it was appropriate to the nature of the party as well as to the season.

It was with this idea in mind that she centered the lace-covered tea table with a silver container filled with red roses and white narcissi. But the piece de

Sally Forth

SAYS

Mrs. Fort Will Demonstrate Flower Arrangements Today

... FLORAL ARRANGEMENTS long have been the artistic hobby of Marie Johnson (Mrs. Jesse) Fort, of Griffin. She is a former Atlantan, and always comes to the rescue of her friends when they need advice on this subject. It was talented Marie who arranged the lovely flowers when Mrs. Charles Shelton gave a party last fall for her daughter and son, Elizabeth and Charles Shelton Jr., at the Chatham road home of the hostess. And it was also Marie's artistic touch that lent distinction to the lovely decorations at the party Mrs. Ayers Robert gave for her daughter, Louisa, just before Louisa became the bride of Grant Le Roux.

Intimate friends of Marie have persuaded her to come to Atlanta today to give them a demonstration of the correct way to feature horticultural arrangements after they have luncheon at the Georgian Terrace. These friends will assemble in the lounge to hear Marie discuss and illustrate her subject upon which she is so well informed.

Composing the group are Mesdames Arthur Acklin, Anita Stewart Armstrong, Roy Collier, B. F. Coggins, Milton Dargan Jr., Strother Fleming, John Fitts, Louise Ayres Robert, Luther Rosser, Parker Sanford, John Staton, Charles Shelton, Walter Scheyer, Lawson Thornton, George M. Stout, Fonville McWhorter and Miss Mary Warren.

... ONE OF the city's loveliest spots this spring will be the Iris Club garden in Ansley Park, which will be aglow with yellow and white hues of TWO THOUSAND pansies! Members of the Iris Club, you know, have recently replanted and redesigned the garden, and the pansies were used to outline each flower bed.

To Mrs. Dowdell Brown, Mrs. Lawrence Willett, Mrs. Herbert Reynolds and Mrs. Owen Perry goes the credit for the artistic placement of the tiny flowers. As members of the January committee it fell to them to design the colorful borders.

And, incidentally, they did the planting in the rain!

... LITERALLY, there was "music in the air" out at the Stewart Birds' residence on Valley road last evening. It was a delightful feature of the entertainment provided by Mr. and Mrs. Bird and their mother, Mrs. Samuel Candler Dobbs, for the buffet supper at which they honored pretty Anne Bellinger and her fiancé, Charles S. Archer Jr., of Baltimore, Md. The affair followed the rehearsal of the popular young couple's marriage, which will be an important event of today.

As a feature of the musical program, Mrs. Mary Griffith Dobbs, noted harpist, and Mrs. Walter Bedard, who accompanied her at the piano, presented a group of classical pieces and popular old favorites.

Graham Jackson also delighted the guests with selections played on the organ. He also played the accompaniment for a chorus of eight voices in a group of Negro spirituals. The infectious rhythm of the spirituals was caught by the guests, who kept time to the music with foot-patting and hand-clapping and who couldn't stop bursting forth into song every now and then!

The house was turned into a veritable floral bower for the occasion, with hothouse roses and colorful spring blossoms decorating the drawing room and library. The bridal motif of white and green was used in the dining room, where the lace-covered table presented a picture of beauty with its central display of calla lilies, snapdragons and gladioli arranged in a silver epergne.

Mrs. L. F. Bellinger, Anne's mother, and Mrs. Hiram Allen, her sister, assisted in entertaining, and Mrs. Frankton Dobbbs poured coffee.

Miss Ewing Weds William M. Fife At Church Rites

Miss Margaret Evangeline Ewing, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. L. G. Ewing, became the bride of William Miller Fife, of Mount Carmel, S. C., yesterday afternoon at the Central Presbyterian church.

Dr. Stuart R. Oglesby, pastor, officiated at 5:30 o'clock in the presence of a group of friends of the young couple. A musical program was presented by Mrs. Susie Reede Kennedy, organist, and Mrs. Walter Ward, soloist.

An attractive arrangement of palms and ferns formed the background for a central basket of white flowers flanked on either side by candelabra.

Groomsmen were Bill Horne and Floyd Teaford, and ushers were Raymond Lyle and Jimmie Singleton.

Miss George Hunt was maid of honor and the bridesmaids were Misses Martha Respass, of Decatur, and Catherine Johnson, of Lawrenceville. Their gowns of powder blue chiffon were made with long full sleeves, shirred waists and very full skirts. They wore rhinestone Juliet caps with blue nose veils and their flowers were old-fashioned nosegays of pink carnations and blue delphinium tied with pink and powder blue ribbon.

The bride was given in marriage by her father and the best man was H. A. Fife, of Ware Shoals, S. C., brother of the bridegroom. The bride wore a model of eggshell crepe featuring fitted waist with sweetheart neckline, shirred sleeves fitted at the wrists, and a full skirt gathered to the waist in scallops and falling into a long graceful train.

She wore a fingertip veil of net held by a halo cap of lace and orange blossoms. It was worn by the former Miss Marie Stalker, now Mrs. M. M. Smith. The bride's only ornament was a gold pin, the gift of the bridegroom's mother, and she carried a handkerchief that had been carried by his mother in her wedding in the same church.

The bride's mother wore a black dress with gold clips, black and white accessories and a corsage of sweetheart roses. The bridegroom's mother wore black with matching accessories and a similar corsage.

After the wedding, the young couple left on a motor trip to Arlington, Va., where they will reside. The bride traveled in a three-piece black wool tailored suit with gray Canadian wolf collar and accessories of black and white. She wore orchids.

Purples Battle Monroe Today

What's the Answer? How would you explain the psychology of major league baseball owners arguing over whose star is paid the most money?

That's what a lot of baseball men would like to know. I imagine most owners must feel the same as do those in the Southern League. They can't get any sense out of the head men of Cleveland and Detroit arguing whether Bob Feller or Bobo Newsom draws the highest salary.

Southern League moguls think it is bad psychology as far as the rest of the players are concerned. And no doubt it is.

Rudy York, for instance, doesn't draw any $30,000 a year. Rudy, who's quite a hitter, collected only $10,000 last year and is asking an increase of $5,000, which hasn't been granted.

Since the salary angles have been publicized, Rudy no doubt wonders why it is Hank Greenberg, who's going into the Army, is worth so much more than he is. Greenberg was drawing down more than $30,000 a year.

Is Greenberg worth twice as much to Detroit as York, who supplanted him at first base? And since Greenberg is going into the Army, can't Detroit afford to give York a $5,000 increase over last year's salary without so much quibbling?

I, somehow, can't figure it out.

But, for that matter, neither can Southern League owners understand the motives for debating whether old Bobo Newsom or Bob Feller is the highest paid hurler in the game.

To the innocent bystander it doesn't look like good business judgment. It never has made for harmony to let the other members of an organization realize that one or two of the members is making all the money.

Ain't Got No Body Broadway odds are 2 to 1 Red Burman won't go past four rounds with Joe Louis tonight. The odds are 5 to 1 that Burman won't last the full 15 rounds.

No one, probably including Jack Dempsey, gives Burman an outside chance to win. Dempsey's protégé, a Baltimore product, is regarded strictly as a body puncher.

And it is a well-known fact that Louis ain't got no body where body punchers are concerned. If Burman moves in that close on the Brown Bomber early, the fight may not last long enough for newsreel pictures.

Seems to me the best way to fight Louis is after the manner of Bob Pastor. Pastor stayed away from him. And then there was the South American way. Remember that rumba specialist—what was his name?—Arturo Godoy? It wasn't much of a fight, but Godoy was around at the finish.

I only saw Louis fight once, and what he did to Max Schmeling in less than two minutes was a caution—a caution to all future opponents who planned to step in the ring and punch it out with him.

Come to think of it, the Broadway odds are conservative. It might as well be 50 to 1 in Louis' favor.

After all, a boxing monopoly rides with Louis every time he defends his title. And Mike Jacobs is not taking any chances on losing his grip. You may lay to that.

Wildfire "And by the way," remarked the tall, dark and handsome visitor from North Carolina, "when are you leaving for the coast?"

"What coast?"

"Why, the Pacific coast. I just heard you were going out there."

Funny thing about rumors and idle gossip. Senseless reports always spread like wildfire. Truth never travels half as fast. The California report has come up intermittently for a couple of days.

It reminds me of several years ago when I was covering the international speed trials at Daytona Beach. Lee Bible, a Daytona dirt track amateur, had contracted to drive the Triplex, a seven-ton monster on wire wheels.

As the Triplex thundered through the measured mile it resembled a funeral pyre on wheels. Black smoke belched from the motors and trailed off to a thin wispy.

Seconds later Bible was dead. The Triplex, going out of control, swerved from the course and smashed into the dunes, throwing sand and oil and parts a hundred feet into the air. Charley Traub, a Pathe newsreel cameraman, was cut in twain as he stood on the beach capturing the scene. His camera was untouched. He simply had jumped into the path of the metal monster.

Soon a report was flashed over the wires that "Tracy Mathewson, a newsreel cameraman, was killed in the crash."

It was some time before the report was corrected.

Weeks before Mathewson, in charge of the Pathe unit, had given Traub his identification card enabling him to go to the top of Bok Tower for newsreel pictures. Traub had forgotten to return the card.

Strangely enough, Mathewson's card was the first identification found on Traub, and searchers took it for granted he was Mathewson.

Tracy was happy to report that news of his demise, like that of Mark Twain, was a bit premature.

Typists Clash With Jordan At Grady Court

Canton Paces Big Seven as 2d Round Play Begins.

By CHARLIE ROBERTS.

The Big Seven basketball teams are like the sleeping circus giant who was all under the blanket except his head and feet. Five teams virtually are blanketed in second place, with league-leading Canton sticking way out on top and Tech High sticking out even farther at the bottom.

That is the way the league race stacks up as it whips into the second round of play today when Monroe and Boys' High tackle one another at Grady court in the first game of a double-header at 3 o'clock. Jordan comes up to take a second crack at much-improved Commercial in the 4 o'clock tilt. Canton journeys to the Columbus High court for a nocturnal clash tonight.

As things shape up now it is anybody's race. Canton, after going unbeaten four games, took a sound licking from Rufus Godwin's Typists last week, and the Purple Hurricane has been bludgeoned at a fearful rate in their last few games. It will take quite a rally for any five to overhaul the Greensies now, but at the present, at least, both Boys' High and Commercial are playing the best ball in the loop.

Both Jordan and Columbus will have to be reckoned with too, as both have sound games. Jordan, especially, with Lester Ray, probably the best scoring player in the league, should be tough to handle. Monroe appears to be an in-and-out, but when "Snooks" Hyder is hitting the basket they, too, can be mighty ornery.

In today's double-header the two Atlanta fives will have the revenge motive to spur them on. Monroe knocked the breath out of the Purple Hurricane in their first meeting and won by three points. Clint Castleberry and Company feel that it was a lucky accident and are out to prove it.

The Typists took quite a shelling from Jordan in Columbus in their first opener, but that was before they began to click, and upset the strong teams. The Homeless Commercial—without a court to call their own—are all set for another one of those victories everyone has been calling upsets. They have won so many now that another win will hardly fall into that category.

Gaston To Enter Georgia in March

Joe Gaston, star left-handed pitcher and first baseman on the Boys' High team who also hurled for the Oakland City Amateur champions, graduated from Boys' High Monday night. He has decided to cast his lot with the Georgia Bulldogs. He will enter the state university in March. The Bulldogs are getting a mighty good southpaw hurler.

Deal and Faulk Leave Auburn After Ruckus

Taylor, Another Gridder, Also Resigns Following Trouble.

AUBURN, Ala., Jan. 30.—(P)—Two football stars, Fullback Rufus Deal and End Teedie Faulk, resigned as students at Alabama Polytechnic Institute (Auburn) today, along with Thurston Taylor, a sophomore guard, it was announced by college authorities.

The resignations followed weekend ruckuses in which five Auburn students ended up in city court.

The resigning today did not divulge future plans, although campus rumor had it they would enter military service for a year, since all are eligible for draft.

Deal, a 195-pound junior fullback, was counted upon as Auburn's No. 1 offensive threat next season. He was a sensation as a sophomore in 1939 and was starting until injured in the Georgia Tech game last fall.

Faulk, also a junior, was Auburn's standout end in scoring two touchdowns to beat Villanova in the closing game. He was also a varsity basketball player.

Taylor showed promise as a lineman. The three losses bring to 11 the number of lettermen Coach Jack Meagher must replace next season.

Ruth To Teach At Doan School

PALATKA, Fla., Jan. 30.—(P)—Ray L. Doan, operator of a baseball school here, said today Babe Ruth had advised him by telephone from New York that he would report February 23 to join the faculty of the school.

Doan, who said he talked with Ruth last night, declared the "Bambino" denied recent reports that he was through with baseball and added: "I am recovering from a throat infection and am feeling fine."

HIGHEST PAID?—An argument has been going on between owners of Cleveland and Detroit as to whether Bobo Newsom, above, or Bob Feller is the highest paid pitcher in baseball. Newsom, who will draw $37,500, is shown above as the special Constitution photographer found him at his home in Hartsville, S. C. Bobo's a hero in Hartsville. At right he is taking his fan mail out of a box at the post office. Below, he poses with mules "York and Greenberg." The excavation is for a new Newsom filling station.

Confident Red Burman Ready For Joe Louis

Bookies Lay 3 to 1 Challenger Won't Reach 10th Round in Champ's 13th Title Defense.

By SID FEDER.

NEW YORK, Jan. 30.—(P)—Red Burman's two-year chase for a crack at Joe Louis' heavyweight championship ends in Madison Square Garden tomorrow night.

The Baltimore battler, ranked among the first five heavyweights in the world for the past two years, gets his chance with the Bomber in a fight scheduled for 15 rounds, but which all but Red's very best friends say will make him sorry he ever got the idea.

Off his record, Burman ranks as the most workmanlike warrior to take a shot at Joe in a couple of years. Yet, Promoter Mike Jacobs and Louis' own fistic family are taking Burman so seriously they've already lined up tussles for Joe against Gus Dorazio in Philadelphia next month, Abe Simon in Detroit in March and Arturo Godoy in Los Angeles in April.

13TH DEFENSE.

It will be the 13th title defense in Louis' record-breaking run as head man of fistiana and his second trip to the post in the fight-a-month campaign Promoter Jacobs lined up for him this winter and spring. He stopped Al McCoy, an over-stuffed middleweight, in five rounds in Boston last month, but his ragged showing there, as well as Burman's unorthodox crocheting, hooking style, has raised the hopes of Red's supporters.

As usual, the lure of Joe's punching dynamite promises to make this outing a financial success. Jacobs expects more than 15,000 customers and hopes to count a gross gate of $60,000 or over.

In spite of the sky-high odds against him—the bookmakers will lay 3 to 1 he isn't around for the tenth round—Red is more confident than most of the fellows who have sampled the brand of bombs Louis distributes. Burman has been in hard training for more than 10 weeks, and plans to meet Joe with a solid hook to the body and an overhand right to the head. He borrowed the former from Jack Dempsey, who has been his sponsor for several years, and the latter from Max Schmeling, who flattened Louis with the same punch.

Provided he can keep his chin out of the way and confuse Louis for a while, Red may stay around long enough to speak a little piece tomorrow night, say seven rounds or so. But the chances are he'll get careless, offer Joe a target and school will let out right then. This corner picks Louis to do it inside of five rounds.

Fouts, of Walthour & Hood, holds down second place with 64 counters in six contests. Following are the 10 leading scorers:

Rens To Play Clark Quintet On Wednesday

Exhibition Game Scheduled at Progressive Club Court.

The Progressive Club court at 402 Pryor street has been secured for the Renaissance basketball game here next Wednesday night, and Clark University has been selected to encounter the professional quintet.

Clark, holders of the Southern Negro Conference championship, last year defeated Virginia Union University, which team later defeated Long Island University. The Rens team features some of the most skilled basketball players in the world.

Booker T. Washington, high school champions, will play Adelphi, open amateur champions, in a preliminary contest at 7:30. The main game is scheduled at 9 o'clock.

The performance at the Progressive Club will be for white fans only, with a separate date and site to be arranged for Negro basketball fans.

The Rens have drawn praise from sportswriters all over the country for their masterful exhibition of goal shooting and court coverage.

Here's what the New York sports experts think of them: JIMMY POWERS, New York Daily News: "Tarzan" Cooper gets the center position on my "dream team."

JIMMY WOODS, Brooklyn Eagle: "The Rens are undoubtedly one of the best pro basketball teams in the country."

MAX KASE, N. Y. Journal-American: "If you've seen the Rens in action on the court, you've seen the best in basketball today."

Smiley Johnson Thinks He Can Play Pro Football Five Years

Ex-Bulldog Guard, Back in School, Says Professional Game Easier Than College; Calls Stydhar and Drake Best Players.

By TOM McRAE.
ATHENS, Ga., Jan. 30.—Smiley Johnson is completing work for his degree, but doesn't expect he'll need it for five years.

Smiley, alternate captain of the 1939 Georgia eleven, enrolled at the university this quarter after playing his freshman professional year with the Green Bay Packers last fall.

"I believe I can go at top speed up there for five years," he said, as he rested between wind sprints.

He walked from the baseball field to where the Bulldogs were going through spring drills and met his old running mate at guard, Walter Wilfong, who was a spectator. They shook hands and after a while Walter asked:

"How you like up there, Smiley?"

"Brute, you ought to come up and play with us next fall."

"You know I'm not that good."

"You were better than I was, Brute. I got to play about half of all the games. You make good money."

Here Smiley told how much he had saved and the figure indicated that pro ball pays good and also that Smiley is preparing for a rainy day. The day will be very rainy if Smiley can't weather it.

Just then Coach Whitworth called Smiley over to show some of his guards how to block while he went to work with the tackles. When it seemed they couldn't quite catch on, Smiley, wearing only sweat clothes, would throw a block that invariably bowled over a big boy clad in a padded outfit that made him look like the Wizard of Oz.

When spectators asked about pro players Smiley, without hesitation named Stydhar, 240-pound tackle of the Chicago Bears as the finest lineman he faced, and Johnny Drake, of the Cleveland Rams, as the hardest back to stop.

"Chicago had the best team I ever saw. I believe Osmanski runs harder now than he did at Holy Cross."

As you probably remember the Bulldogs had some tough afternoons with Osmanski and Chicago won the professional title by a 73-0 landslide.

EASY GOING.
You often read how much tougher pro ball is than the college game, but Smiley says it's the other way around.

"We practiced about an hour and a half in the morning and hardly ever was there much scrimmaging. In college you practice longer and have to spend a lot of time in classes and studying."

Smiley was the third lightest man on the Green Bay squad, only Don Hutson and a back weighed less. His playing weight was between 197 and 200. He weighs 205 now.

Coach Whitworth asked Smiley if he could help him every day. "No, sir, coach," Smiley said. "I'm afraid not. These teachers have got me studying too hard. Why, I have to read a book a week besides studying a heap," he explained, grinning.

Smithie Mittmen Box Here Tonight
The Indians are coming! Boxers from Cherokee High school, Cherokee, N. C., are to trade punches with Coach Allen Shi's Tech High boxers in the squared circle in the Henry Grady gym tonight.

The classy Smithie squad will face a tough assignment, as the Savannah High mittmen, one of the best high school teams in the state, outgassed the Indians by only one and one-half points recently despite the fact two of Cherokee's best leather slingers were unable to compete.

Ten big fights are on the card. Pairings follow:
110-Turner (T. H.) vs. Johnny Jackson; 115-Flagler (T. H.) vs. David Reid; 118-Williams (T. H.) vs. Alva White; 120-Bradley (T. H.) vs. Thomas Littlejohn; 125-Stokes (T. H.) vs. Reggy Thompson; 130-Wood (T. H.) vs. Guy Crowe; 135-Hammond (T. H.) vs. Jasper Henry; 135-Hendrix (T. H.) vs. Aubrey Eward; 145-Coleman (T. H.) vs. Sherman Lillard; and 150-Bond (T. H.) vs. Sam Wilson.

DENTAL COLLEGE WINS, 41-35.
Two games were played Thursday night in the Civic Basketball League at the Y. M. C. A. and found the Methodist and Dental College "B" squads coming through for victories. The defeated quintets were "Y" Triangles and Suburban All-Stars.

The original schedule called for a meeting of the Young Men's Senior Association and the Florida Aces, but this engagement was postponed until a later date.

In downing the Suburban All-Stars, Dental College "B" sagers had to play their best contest of the season. Five times during the initial half the score was tied and when the period closed the score was tied at 21 to 21. In the closing frame the winners forged to the front on baskets by Smith, Childress and Wellborn to win a thrilling 41-to-35 game.

"Y" TRIANGLE (15) CAL. METH. (40). Castleberry (3) F. Lewis (10). Marshall (3) F. Lay (10). Conklin (2) G. Wood (9). Irie (4) G. Shell (4). Mason (6) F. Kite (23). Substitutes: "Y" Triangles, Collins; Calvary, Roper (8); Bobbi (4); DENTAL "B" (41) S. ALL-STARS (35). Rosen (6) F. Thompson (23). Smith (11) F. Carter (23). Vann (2) G. Wagner (4). Childress (11) G. Swint (2). Floyd (2) G. College (2). Substitutes: Dental Wellborn (3), Griffin, Cornell (2), Watt (2).

OWLS CAPTURE ELEVENTH.
Coach Bill Layton's Evening College Owls captured their 11th game out of 14 last night when they turned back a strong Athens Y. M. C. A. quintet, 60 to 56, in a hard-fought contest.

Hickman scored 21 points to lead the winners' attack. Teagle was second with 19 points.

Federal Men Search Fields For Violators

By JOHN MARTIN.
When shooting is left in the hands of decency and is controlled solely by the amount of ammunition many hunters kill their own sport.

This distressing condition over many years has reduced duck and dove hunting, in particular, to such a low that it takes two shots with a full-choke 30-inch gun and No. 4s to tickle the belly of an underground snail.

So tonight, or at sundown, the 1940-41 dove season, worst in the history of Georgia, will close. That is, according to federal and state laws. There are hunters who will scorn the close. Some will be apprehended; others will continue to whittle their sport further below normal.

On the eve of the close the United States Fish and Wildlife Service announced that eight more shooters had been arrested yesterday on charges of violating the regulations on dove shooting. The Coffee county gunners, picked up near Douglas, were charged with exceeding the bag limit and shooting with guns holding more than three shells.

This brought the total to 46 arrested in the few days, all made by federal men hauled in to fill the breach caused by the wholesale dismissal of wildlife rangers two weeks ago.

The service reported yesterday that additional agents had been brought into Georgia to join the war on persons shooting over baited fields and out of season. They likewise are scanning the lakes and rivers for duck hunters, who by law should have shelved their ammunition the last day in December.

Dismissed wildlife rangers, who held federal commissions before the shakeup, still qualify as non-paid deputy agents, according to the service, and may make arrests. Some of them are still cooperating with federal men, service officials said, and are helping in the enforcement campaign.

It is significant that most of the 46 persons nailed in violation charges were taken up for exceeding the bag limit.

Since the season opened in the northern zone last September 15 the scarcity of doves has alarmed sportsmen. It is true that during the past month many of the gray ghosts have gathered in south and southeast Georgia. But not in the large droves that were common just two or three years ago.

Padgett Refuses Offer By Cardinals
ORLANDO, Fla., Jan. 30.—(P)—Don Padgett, tutoring young catchers at the Joe Stupp baseball school here, said tonight he was refusing his 1941 contract with the St. Louis Cardinals, for whom he hit .399 in 1939.

The 220-pound North Carolinian, forced out of action before the close of the 1940 season by a broken finger, said "I'm ready to go this year and while I realize I didn't have a great season last year, the terms aren't what I feel they should be, but we probably will get together without too much trouble."

He said his finger was "as loose as any of the others because all winter I carried a small rubber ball and squeezed it by the hour."

For Boston Bees
SARASOTA, Fla., Jan. 30.—(P)—Wes Ferrell, the first major league pitcher to win 20 games in each of his first four seasons in the big time, said tonight he expected to play with the Boston Bees this year.

Ferrell, one-time member of a famous brother battery with Rick Ferrell, said he understood a contract was en route here and that when it arrives "I'll sign."

The former ace right-hander began his big pitching streak with Cleveland in 1928. Later he was with the Red Sox, with Washington, the Yankees and Brooklyn.

Bowling News
The two Atlanta teams that are members of the Georgia State Inter-City Bowling League will play out-of-town contests this weekend in the seventh series of the schedule in this high-scoring pin loop.

The Blick's Bowling Center five will be scheduled in Columbus with Alan Liebler, W. E. Lawson, Jack Pearce, Bill McDams and Lowry Whiteman endeavoring to help this Atlanta team hold its three-game lead as they tackle the Columbus Bowling Center five.

The Blick's Bowling Palace team will journey to Macon for a series with the Macon Bowling Academy five, with W. C. Carriger, Lowry, Billy Allen, Sam Barnes, Paul Dreht and Bill Berry wearing the Atlanta colors in this contest.

The Decatur King Pin bowlers will lock horns with the Columbus "Stars" as the former endeavor to better their runner-up position in the team standings.

Five additional entries were filed Thursday for the "Every-Other-Ball" handicap bowling tournament that will be staged on the downtown alleys Saturday afternoon and evening, at 3 and 7:30 o'clock, with entry open to all bowlers in Atlanta.

A $10 first prize is to be awarded the separate winners in both the men and women's divisions, with an entry fee of 25c per person being charged the players and this amount including the cost of the five games bowled.

Game and Fish Body Favors Uniform Laws

House Committee Reports Favorably on Quail Season Change in 18 Southeast Georgia Counties.

By JOHN MARTIN.
The house committee last night batted .333 on a series of bills designed to amend the state game and fish laws.

Presided over by Chairman R. W. Ferguson, of Camden county, and attended by only 16 members, the committee acted favorably on a bill calling for a uniform law on the quail season and reported unfavorably on a bill exempting persons over 65 from buying hunting and fishing licenses. It likewise defeated an amendment calling for a year-round open season on fishing.

In a meeting that lasted nearly two hours numerous bills were discussed, but only three were acted upon. Others were deferred and will be studied by sub-committees composed of two members each from north, middle and south Georgia.

The bill receiving favorable action was introduced by John Ferguson, of Sumter county. It calls for a change of the law on quail shooting from November 1 in 18 southeast Georgia counties to the old November 20 opening.

Among the bills discussed was a proposal by Representative F. H. Sills, of Candler, that ordinaries be allowed to handle sale and distribution of hunting and fishing licenses. Under this plan these county officials would receive 10 per cent and would be placed under a $500 surety bond. They would be required to make regular remittances directly to the Wildlife Division.

Under the present plan the Department of Revenue issues licenses from Atlanta and receives approximately 3 per cent of collections for its trouble.

Action likewise was delayed on a proposal by Robert M. Heard, 23-year-old solon from Elbert, calling for a law to permit seining in certain parts of the Savannah river.

Zachary D. Cravey, newly appointed director of the Department of Natural Resources, took part in the discussions upon invitation of Chairman Ferguson.

Buddy Baer Meets Galento in March
NEW YORK, Jan. 30.—(UP)—Tony Galento will meet Buddy Baer over the 10-round route in Madison Square Garden in March, probably the 26th, Promoter Mike Jacobs announced today.

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 30.—(P)—Kayak II, a top contender for the $100,000 Santa Anita Handicap, has been withdrawn from the roll of candidates for the rich prize, Owner Charles S. Howard said today.

Kayak II, winner of the 1939 running of the Santa Anita Handicap and runner-up to his famed stablemate Seabiscuit, last year, suffered an injured tendon in his right front leg yesterday.

The mishap will throw the Argentine-bred 6-year-old out of training.

Mrs. Roosevelt Declines Bid of Youth Congress

F. D. R., Hillman, McNutt Also Reject Invitations To Speak.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 30.—(AP)—Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, who addressed the American Youth Congress here a year ago and defended it against charges of "Communist domination," has declined an invitation to speak at a gathering here next month sponsored by the congress.

Disclosing this today, a congress official said that President Roosevelt, Sidney Hillman, associate defense production director; Paul V. McNutt, Federal Security Administrator, and Philip Murray, CIO president, likewise had turned down invitations to speak at the gathering.

Joseph Cadden, executive secretary of the congress, said in a statement that Mrs. Roosevelt had been asked to attend an open discussion of the administration's lend-lease bill at the first session of the town meeting of youth on February 7.

After saying that the President, Hillman and McNutt also had declined invitations, Cadden added: "We are sure that young people will be interested to learn that not a single leading spokesman of the administration is desirous of putting its policies to the test of free discussion before the nationwide town meeting of youth."

'Tropical Follies' At Capitol Sunday

Representing one of the largest and most realistic sets built for the screen in recent months were the docks, buildings and waterfront streets erected at Universal studios for "San Francisco Docks" which will open a week's engagement at the Capitol theater Sunday along with the new stage show "Tropical Follies."

Complete in every detail, the settings provided colorful and authentic backgrounds for the picture which will star Burgess Meredith, Irene Hervey, Barry Fitzgerald, Raymond Walburn, Esther Ralston, Robert Armstrong and Lewis Howard. There were wharf sets, sailing schooners, fishermen's nets, and the wide variety of boats and warehouses familiar to the San Francisco waterfront district.

"The Saint in Palm Springs" on the screen and "Sensations of 1941" on the stage continues through tomorrow.

3,000,000 More Must File Income Return

More than 8,000,000 Americans who have never been liable for federal income tax must file returns on or before March 15, Marion H. Allen, collector of internal revenue for Georgia, said yesterday in a radio interview with Francis W. Shugart, state director of the office of government reports.

Allen pointed out that personal exemption of a single person has been reduced from $1,000 to $800, and married persons and heads of families will be allowed an exemption of $2,000 instead of $2,500. Exemption of $400 for dependent children remains, however.

Previously, an individual was required to file a return if his net income was $1,000, if single, and $2,500 if married or head of a family. Allen also pointed out that a special device tax of 10 per cent is now superimposed on the returns.

Roosevelt Asks $375,000,000 More for WPA

Fund Would Operate Department From March to June.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 30.—(AP)—President Roosevelt asked congress today to provide an additional $375,000,000 to operate the Work Projects Administration from March 1 to June 30. He also requested that the limitation on expenditures of relief funds on defense projects be increased from $25,000,000 to $50,000,000.

WPA was given $975,650,000 by the last congress to spend until March 1. The President accompanied his request by a letter from the budget bureau which said that the $375,000,000 together with small balance on hand would provide work for about 22 per cent of the estimated unemployed until June 30.

House Quartette Fills Dull Spot

Even the Georgia house of representatives has its occasional dull moments. To fill one of them yesterday, Speaker Randall Evans called on the Callaway quartette for a selection. It was "Church in the Wildwood," and judging by the legislators' applause it filled the blank on the calendar nicely.

Members of the quartette, who said they'd be glad to oblige any day, are Representatives Callaway, of Newton; Jones, of Richmond; Mims, of Miller, and Gross, of Stephens.

Department Store Sales Up a Third

Department store sales in the Atlanta Federal Reserve district in the week ended January 25 were 31 per cent more than in the corresponding week last year, the Federal Reserve board reported yesterday.

For the nation, sales in the week ended January 25 were 12 per cent more than in the corresponding week last year, and in the week ended January 18 had been nine per cent above a year ago. In the four weeks ended January 25, sales averaged 10 per cent above last year.

DEVIL'S WORK

By CAROLYN WELLS

Vivian Astounds Jean by Announcing He Has Invited an Actress to Forrest Fell

SYNOPSIS.

Dazzled by Vivian Forrest's wealth and ardent love-making, Jean Seiden marries him, although she has been in love with Brandon Sayre, an explorer. Before the first year has passed, she knows that he is implacably impervious and he makes no effort to keep from her his various love affairs. By the end of the second year, she detests him, but she must consider their baby, Florimel, as she has no means of supporting herself. She is naturally patient and Vivian is very proud of his beautiful wife. At times he shows that he loves her in his inconstant way, and he is extremely jealous. His invitation to Sayre to be a member of their house party at Forrest Fell on Long Island puzzles his half brother, Austin. Other guests are Ann Fraser and Suzy Kirk, and John Elman and Peter Haskill. All are fencing enthusiasts and are practicing for a club tournament to be held soon. Vivian is an expert and has insisted upon a daily 15-minute practice with Jean, who has become very skillful with the fall. Little Florimel even comes in for his jealousy—he had wanted a boy—and he seems to take delight in calling Jean away from the baby's nursery to fence with him. Jean realizes soon after Sayre's arrival that her love for him is dead; in fact, she knows she has loved him every day he was away in the jungles. But she determines to put away all thoughts of her love; she is Vivian's wife. NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY:

INSTALLMENT III.

The tournament was planned for one week from that day. It would be in effect a garden party, at Forrest Fell, and every one present might invite any number of guests. The tournament would take place out of doors should the weather be fine, in the gymnasium, otherwise.

The coming week would be given over to practice work in preparation for the championship. It was deemed almost a foregone conclusion where the honors would fall, but Vivian's greater skill in no way deterred the others from their best efforts.

After the business was all transacted, there was some dancing, some flirting and some reviving drink, but the party broke up early, and all went their various ways.

Brandon Sayre went at once to Jean, and said, "Do come out on the terrace with me. I haven't seen you in so long."

"Yes, we will," said Vivian, gayly. "Come along, Suzy, and then we'll be four."

The last thing that Sayre wanted was to be four, and he was inclined to be sulky. It never pleased him to be interfered with.

And did Forrest mean to imply that he would not trust Jean alone with him?

The quartet on the terrace did not stay there long. The two men fell into discussion on a matter of fencing, which had no interest for the two girls.

Jean, indeed, tiring of talking to Suzy, led her into the house, and turned her over to the men there. And then she ran up to the nursery.

Little Florimel was asleep, of course, but the good-natured Rhoda turned on a light, and let the mother watch beside the little crib.

Interruption came in the shape of Vivian himself, who appeared in the doorway and said, rather loudly, "What are you doing here? You know I want you for our practice."

"Yes, I'm coming," she said. "Don't wake the baby."

"Jean," he said, as they walked away, "I have told you not to run off to the nursery when I want you with me."

"I'll meet you in the gym in 10 minutes."

"Ten minutes nothing! You'll come right along now."

"Oh, very well."

It was Vivian's habit to practice his fencing for at least 15 minutes every day. He had been told by one of his best masters that if he followed that plan strictly, he would never slip back in his proficiency.

So, when he married, he made it a rule that he and Jean should have a 15-minute practice period every night, and he had kept her to it. Though, after the baby came, he found it difficult to depend on her, for the devoted mother felt always an invisible force drawing her to the nursery.

The house at Forrest Fell was large and was a rambling sort of structure. It had eels and wings, and some more recent additions like sun room and swimming pool, so that its original design was entirely lost. But the architecture had been well looked after, and though irregular, the result was an impressive pile.

The family rooms were on the east front, and had been made beautiful by Jean herself, who had not needed or wanted the services of a professional decorator.

Vivian's bedroom opened into another room which was called his study, though no student had ever been seen within its walls.

In fact, of late it had become more of an auxiliary gym, and the nightly practice often took place there. The room was so unusual and so full of interesting things that it attracted guests, who tried to make a sitting room of it, and very nearly did.

Jean threw off her gown, but did not put on her fencing uniform, merely keeping on her slip. Demanding her full attention, Vivian practiced with her point of technique, which he hoped would help him win the championship.

He was exacting, he was dictatorial, and though no more so than usual, it seemed to Jean the quarter hour would never pass. He criticized her positions, he told her she had no sense of strategy in her defense and he argued points on which he knew he was wrong, but was not willing to admit it.

The tiny smile that accompanied her gentle replies was easily read by Forrest, and he grew more irritable.

And then Jean knew. Vivian was always nervous and fussy when he was about to tell her something she would not like, and she wondered what it was to be.

His voice turned wheedlesome. "Oh, Jean, she is such a dear little thing! And her wistful eyes, real larkspur eyes, fairly shone as she said, 'How wonderful it would be to sit at the head of your dinner table!' and I said, 'By heaven, you shall!'"

"Opposite you?"

"And where do I sit?"

"At the side of course. It will mean no offense to your dignity; just a good-natured gesture to please the lovely child."

"How old is she?"

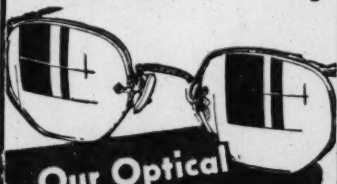

"I haven't the least idea. She has the loveliest nature. Oh, you can't help adoring her! They all will. And look here, this is an order. I want the two nursery rooms and bath fixed up for her use. You can put Rhoda and the child up on the third floor; they'll be better off there by themselves."

Jean stared at him.

"Do you mean that?" Change the furniture all around—

The Army IN GEORGIA

MACON, Ga., Jan. 30.—(P)—Bootlegging, gambling and prostitution must be wiped out in Macon before troops for training are brought to Camp Wheeler, Major W. P. Kennard told American Legionnaires.

The construction boss of the rapidly rising camp said at a Legion meeting that "Macon is notorious throughout not only the south but the whole nation for its laxity and indifference to three laws of its own state." He added he was "speaking unofficially."

Sheriff Jim Hicks asserted, "I don't believe Macon is as white as she's been painted. I don't think Macon is any worse than any other city of the same size."

Mayor C. L. Bowden said the major had not consulted him about "any undesirable local conditions." Police Chief R. L. Miller declined comment.

"What ever justifiable criticism can be made we certainly want to correct," the mayor said. "The army will have the official co-operation of the city."

In his prepared speech, Major Kennard said "Here in Macon and the surrounding area violations of the laws are not only flaunted openly and viciously, but even bragged about."

His statements were made, he said, "purely as a friend among friends."

INDUCTION DIRECTOR TRANSFERRED TO BENNING

First Lieutenant Willis Pearson, who set up and directed the operation of the induction station at Fort McPherson, has been transferred by Fourth Corps Area to Fort Benning, where he will join the 22d Infantry.

Pearson was in charge of the detachment which inducted an average of 100 draftees each day at the local army reservation. He will be succeeded by First Lieutenant W. E. Reynolds, of Atlanta.

LATIN AMERICAN OFFICERS EN ROUTE TO BENNING

NEW ORLEANS, Jan. 30.—(P)—Six army officers from three Central American republics arrived here today aboard the S. S. Ulua en route to Fort Benning, Ga., to study United States military tactics and apply them to their own armies.

MAJOR ELLERTHORPE GOES TO HINESVILLE

Major Dean S. Ellert Thorpe, coast artillery corps, yesterday was ordered from Marietta, Ga., to Hinesville, Ga., according to army orders issued at Washington.

SECRETARY PATTERSON PAUSED HERE BRIEFLY

Assistant Secretary of War Robert P. Patterson paused briefly yesterday at Candler airport en route to Washington from an inspection tour of factories in San Diego and Los Angeles. Accompanying Assistant Secretary Patterson were Warren S. Egge, legal adviser in air matters; Major Frank Seifert, Major Ralph C. Scott, Major Robert A. Ginsburgh, and Captain Hunter Harris and Captain J. P. Holcomb, pilots of the plane in which the party traveled.

McGehee Afraid Of Senate 'Mike'

Senator John H. McGehee, who debates with great feeling, kept the upper house roaring with laughter yesterday afternoon while he was speaking on the suspension bill.

Invited to come up and speak over the microphone, the elderly senator refused, saying "I'm afraid of that thing."

At one point in the debate Senator McGehee came up close to President Redwine, shaking his finger vigorously, which promptly led President Pro Tem H. B. Edwards to intercede and warn them not to get too close.

Later he declared his love for the senate president by promising to support him if he ran for governor. Again this prompted Presiding Officer Edwards to remark: "I'm glad you two love each other."

Greenhaus' Plea Studied By Judge

District Judge E. Marvin Underwood yesterday took under advisement the habeas corpus plea of Sam Greenhaus, of New York, seeking release from the Atlanta federal penitentiary, where he is serving a term for mail fraud.

Greenhaus was sentenced in New York for eight years, served three years and then won conditional probation and release on the five years remaining, following appeal to the second circuit court of appeals of New York. He allegedly violated the probation and is seeking release on the remaining term, which expires in September.

BARRANQUILLA, Colombia, Jan. 30.—(P)—The United States destroyer Semmes and the submarine Triton, the latter on her maiden voyage, arrived here today.

LeCraw Pushes North Avenue Underpass Plan

Proposal for $700,000 Project at Marietta Street Revived.

Proposed construction of the $700,000 west North avenue underpass at Marietta street was revived yesterday by city council's finance committee, and a special subcommittee headed by Mayor LeCraw was established to push the project.

At the same time, the finance group approved a proposed amendment to the city budget law which would permit the municipality to budget against 99 per cent of the previous year's income beginning in 1942.

Serving with LeCraw on the underpass subcommittee are Alderman L. O. Moseley, City Attorney Jack C. Savage, Harold Sheats, assistant Fulton county attorney, and Troy G. Chastain, chairman of the Fulton county commission. The mayor told committee members that he already has conferred with a representative of one of the large property owners in the vicinity and that he has been "virtually assured that the company will donate the necessary right of way for the construction." He added he believes other patriotic citizens in the affected area will join in making the underpass possible.

R. B. Pegram, assistant to the vice president of the Southern Railway, said the roads have agreed to give $25,000 to eliminate the dangerous and traffic-snarling crossing, and expressed the hope that something can be done at an early date.

J. T. Marshall, of the federal public roads administration, said the government already has expended about $10,000 in preparation of plans, and that they are not completed.

Captain J. W. Barnett, assistant state highway engineer, also attended, and pledged every co-operation.

Councilman John A. White, chairman of the finance committee, championed the budget charter amendment. He said the proposal would eliminate large surpluses, which "in reality are not surpluses at all because under the present budget law, they must be carried forward to prevent an actual reduction in city expenditures."

Four Men Sentenced For Robbery in Floyd

ROME, Ga., Jan. 30.—Three white men received prison terms, and a fourth a probationary sentence in Floyd superior court upon conviction on charges of committing an $8 robbery.

Defendants and penalties, listed on court records, follow: Perry Howard, 18 months' probation; Joe Vinson, 12 months in public works camp; H. W. Vinson, nine months, and A. C. Portwood, six months.

The four were convicted of robbing Donald Moran near Shanton two weeks ago.

Cotton Storage Bid Proposal Stirs Protest

Commodity Credit Plan Draws Fire of Dixie Spokesmen.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 30.—(UP) Three southern warehousemen, representatives of interior cotton warehouses, today protested to the Senate Agriculture Committee against the Commodity Credit Corporation's call for competitive bidding on storage of 10,000,000 bales of cotton.

The warehousemen, L. T. Barringer, of Memphis, Tenn.; W. C. Russell, of Hamlin, Texas, and S. R. Nichols, of Little Rock, Ark., requested passage of a bill by Senator Kenneth McKellar, Democrat, Tennessee, that would require storage of cotton near the place it was produced.

Marcel Garsaud, general manager of the board of commissioners of the port of New Orleans, charged the measure would force the government to spend much more money to store cotton than if the corporation's plan were followed.
